I DON'T HAVE ENOUGH

by The FlyLady, Marla Cilley

How many times a day do you hear the word "ENOUGH" come out of our mouth or into your brain. Let's just look at damage that this word does to all of us.

1. I don't have ENOUGH time! How many times do you say this one? We all have the same hours in every single day. Enough time to clean it the way your momma made you when you were a child. Enough time to get it right! So when we believe this lie; we stop dead in our tracks and DO NOTHING!

2. I don't have ENOUGH help around the house! Oh Boy!!! Don't get me started on this whiny attitude. If you live alone, it is just you. Single parents don't have any one to whine to or nag either. You don't hear them complain about this. There are no excuses for this attitude. If you will set the example in love you will have the help.

3. I don't have ENOUGH money! We have all said this one; over and over again. Do you want to know the truth of the matter? Rita Davenport taught me. If money will fix it; it is not a problem. If we will quit wasting our money on quick fixes we will have all we need. Say no to buying more clutter! This will happen once the clutter is out of your home. You will find a new freedom from letting go of your clutter. Not only will you have more open spots in your home, but you will also have the money that you didn't waste on the clutter. This goes for fast food, yard sale bargains and department store sales. When you start filling that hole that is in your soul with love, you will no longer need to just dump anything in there to make you feel better.

4. I don't have ENOUGH storage: Yes you do, but you have clutter taking over its space. Let go of the clutter and you won't have to spend money on those storage units. By only having things around you that you love and use; your clutter will have to find a new home. That will release the space for the things you love.

5. I don't get ENOUGH respect. Do you want to know why? Because you don't respect yourself first. You don't need outside admiration when you value yourself. You have to show a little to get a little. This goes even farther than this. The more you give the more you will get. Give it to yourself and reap what you sow!

6. I can't dress well because I don't have ENOUGH nice clothes. This goes back to the respect issue. You don't have to have fancy clothes to feel good and pretty in what you have. A clean pair of jeans and a bright colored shirt and make you feel like a million bucks if you will take the time to dress each morning. Once you quit

COUNCIL NOTES

President Marvin Surber conducted the March 13 meeting of the Van Buren Town Council. The meeting was held in the Council Room at Town Hall and opened at 7 p.m. All in attendance repeated the pledge to the American Flag.

Two representatives from Marion Animal Control were in attendance. They explained how the business operates. Locally when stray dogs are caught running loose they are picked up and taken to the center. If the dog owner is known they are billed, but if the owner is not known the town of Van Buren is billed.

Officer Pat Collins gave the Police report. He reported that he and Officer Donnie Bosley had completed training last month in Indianapolis. They will be going for more training next month.

Superintendent Rob Reeder reported the replacement of a fire hydrant. There was also discussion about the replacement of a computer at the water plant.

Clerk-Treasurer Michelle

Sexton had completed 26 hours of training.

CAMPGROUND HOSTS

Most of Indiana's state parks and reservoirs offer opportunities for campground hosts.

Hosts work a minimum of 20 hours per week in exchange for free camping for a specified period of time. The time period varies at sites, based on the number of applicants and the amount and type of work required.

Properties seek dedicated campers who enjoy working outdoors, with people and with DNR staff. Detailed information about duties and site availability is at stateparks.IN.gov/2404.htm or contact the property of interest.

Completion of a volunteer application is required to apply. To download a form, go to stateparks.IN.gov and click on "How You Can Help" under "Stewardship Links."

MAKE TAX RETURN WORK

Millions of Americans celebrate receiving an income tax refund each year. Many of these same people live each month under the burden of financial hardship, struggling to make ends meet, often falling behind on living expenses and debt obligations.

The February poll hosted on the National Foundation for Credit Counseling (NFCC) website revealed that a significant majority of respondents, 58 percent, intentionally plan to always receive an income tax refund, unnecessarily allowing Uncle Sam the use of their hard-earned money, only to have it returned to them without benefit of interest.

"Not only is the American taxpayer self-inflicting financial pain, they are doing so with intentionality," said Gail Cunningham, spokesperson for the NFCC. "It boils down to a simple choice of determining if it's more important to have extra money in their pocket each month or once per year."

The average income tax refund in recent years has been in the $3,000 range, or approximately $250 per month. For many people, that amount can mean the difference between financial solvency and financial distress, yet they continue to have too much money deducted from their paycheck month after month. Further, although well-meaning, many who receive the refund don't spend it wisely, and even for those who do, once the money is gone, the cycle of struggling to responsibly pay monthly bills begins all over again.

Many consumers argue in favor of an income tax refund saying that it is a forced savings. That is correct, but there is a better way to save. The NFCC advises consumers to implement the following three-step program when they receive this year's refund:

1. Put this year's refund into an interest bearing savings account. Upon receipt of the refund, seize the opportunity to establish an emergency savings account. This will protect against the financial unknown and create a position of financial stability.

2. Adjust W-4 withholding allowances. Although receiving a refund is not a good idea, no one wants to end up owing the government, either. To determine the correct number of withholding allowances, use the worksheet at www.IRS.gov, then submit the revised form to your employer. Know that changes such as the birth of a child, a death, or divorce may impact the number of necessary deductions, thus requiring further revisions. An adjusted form may be submitted at any time during the year.

3. Responsibly allocate additional monthly income as appropriate. Now that the money that was going to the government is coming to the consumer in the form of a larger paycheck, it is his or her responsibility to make smart decisions regarding how to spend it. Make it a priority to keep living expenses, the rent or mortgage, utilities, and insurance premiums current. The next most important payment is any secured loan, for instance a vehicle payment, followed by unsecured debt such as credit cards. If the savings account has been tapped, replenish it.

This system stops the dependency on an income tax refund, establishes savings, and provides additional money each month in order to remain financially stable.

"Since worker's paychecks are smaller this year due to the Social Security deduction having been increased to its former level, it becomes even more critical that consumers find ways to increase their disposable income. For those receiving a refund, adjusting withholding allowances is an easy and

GRANDMA AND DADDY

SAM

(article written by Suzanne Slater Boeing, now deceased)

Let me tell you about my paternal grandparents, Samuel and Hallie Slater. We called them Grandma and Daddy Sam. In the 1940's our family lived with them in a small town in Indiana and for us grandchildren they were a second set of parents.

Grandma and Daddy Sam were old fashioned "picture-book" grandparents. Grandmothers today color their hair, work out at health spas, wear color coordinated "sweats", and often manage to appear little different from their grandchildren's parents. My grandma wore dress of dark colored cotton or crepe with sleeves that were always below the elbow, regardless of the weather. Her hemline was several inches below the knee and never responsive to whims of fashion. Except on the most formal occasions (church), a large bibbed apron covered the front of the dress. Her stockings of thick cotton were held in place by rolled garters and her shoes were, of course, black grannie oxfords. She wore her grey hair in a bun and would never consider painting, or even powdering, her face. When an occasion called for her to look her best, she "put in" her false teeth, normally kept in a glass in the cupboard.

Grandfathers today strive to be as young-looking and fashion conscious as their wives--some even use monoxodil! But my Daddy Sam cut his own hair. He wore canvass work pants and long-sleeved wool shirts. Except in the warmest weather, he bundled up in an olive-drab, wool cardigan. He only wore a tie when Grandma wore her teeth. He chewed Mail Pouch tobacco and a tin can sat by his chair in lieu of a spittoon.

Even by the standards of their day, my grandparents were poorly educated people. They seldom traveled and knew little of the world outside their township. But they were open and accepting of strangers, harbored no prejudices, and looked for and expected to find the best in everyone they met. They were kind-hearted and never, ever, did I hear them speak disparagingly of anyone. Well, there was one exception -- for reasons he never really could explain, Daddy Sam had no use for the "Roosians". He distrusted and disliked them, and I'm sure it was with some satisfaction that he found much of his world come 'round to his way of thinking when the Iron Curtain descended.

I'm not sure of my grandfather's origins, but Grandmas, whose maiden name was Ulmer, was German (or Dutch, as she called it). And she certainly inherited the German housewife's mania for cleanliness. She chased dirt like the Dutch lady on the cleanser container. During meals she hovered near those eating at the table (she, herself, never ate until everyone was fed and the pots and pans done). The instant a plate was emptied, Grandma snatched it up and hurried it to the sink. And I have seen her get up from her sickbed and "tidy up" the house in preparation for the doctor's visit.

Grandma and Daddy Sam had few leisure pleasures. They listened to the radio; he hunted; and she enjoyed walking to town to gossip with friend on Main Street and in the stores. They did not believe in playing cards or going to movie theaters. But they indulged their grandchildren. We could play "Old Maid" right in the house -- Grandma did not consider it real gambling; and they pinched pennies from their pension to

45TH ANNIVERSARY

Picture a Brady bunch of sorts, a father with children, a mother with children and both without a spouse. Could you imagine meeting the person you are destined to grow old with at a PWP (Parents without Partners) Gathering? This event most assuredly lends credence to the declaration, "I may not be your first, but I will be your last."

Art and Rose (Miser) Broyles found each other just this way. Each with three children, each had lost a child, and each found one another and started a life on his farm in Huntington, Indiana. Pledging their love and promising their fidelity on March 22, 1968, and now here we are 45 years later, seven children between them and a handful of grandchildren and even great grandchildren within their fold.

Art Broyles, currently residing in Warren, Indiana, spent his life in Huntington, Indiana. Retired from G.E., he can lay claim to Farmer, Carpenter, Mechanic, Jack-of-all-Trades, and spends most of his days restoring his tractors, cars and piddling in his garage. He has held office with the Huntington Historical Society. He also owns the Broyles Family Homestead in Huntington, Indiana, established 1872.

Rose (Miser) Broyles, from Fort Wayne, Indiana, is a retired from Richard's Restaurant as Regional Manager. She is currently the director of the Food Pantry in Warren, Indiana, and can be found always lending a helping hand. She is an excellent cook, seamstress, mother and teacher.

Art and Rose always managed to find resolutions to difficulties in their marriage without their children having fear of Mom and Dad fighting or arguing with one another. Things were discussed and decided on together. Their children were given an example of how to make the best of what you have, how to work things out without a fight or an argument and just how important and rewarding hard work could be. How fortunate it must have been to be a child in that family? It has been my privilege to be a daughter-in-law to them for the past decade.

HAPPILY EVER AFTER

Dedicated to Art & Rose Broyles

"The perfect marriage" ... There's really no such thing.

There are ups & downs and no way rounds, and times that can be lean.

The way a couple faces things will dictate their own story, Makes all the difference in the world between sadness & glory.

It's not about the kids they have, or the one they share. It's the way they treat them all; just how they show they care.

Not many couples manage to stay together this long.

I believe it's just because the love they share's so strong. Thinking of them, I see the model of "Happily Ever After". And I recognize just why they last; it's all their Joy & Laughter.

Each treats the other like their very best friend;

Supporting, loving, listening, giving respect to the very end.

Though it hasn't been as easy as they've made it seem.

It is the best example I can find of living the dream.

So hats off to the two of you for lasting Forty-Five Years,

For muddling your way through everyday despite tragedies & tears.

Although it's been met with some debate the actual date is March 22nd 1968.

give us money for movies and ice cream.

Grandma did make a once-in-a-lifetime exception to her prohibition against movies. After evening chores my mother used to read to Grandma. One winter she read "Gone with the Wind", and when that movie came to our small town, Grandma went to see Scarlett and Rhett. Mother claims she fell in love with Clark Gable and talked about the movie for years.

I'll write more about my grandparents later -- don't you think I was lucky to know them?

IBA CONSUMER TIPS

Do You Have a Will?

A recent survey at Lawyer.com reports that approximately 35 percent of adults in the United States do not have valid wills. If you are one of these people, make a resolution to take care of this basic responsibility this year. The following are some issues to consider when drawing up a will. But first, seek a good lawyer to help ensure that your estate will be divided as you wish. Decide Who Gets Your Possessions

When you draft a will, you direct who receives your possessions when you die. Additionally you can use a will to make charitable donations. Your will may also be used to disinherit estranged heirs or to unequally distribute possessions to heirs who have already received substantial gifts.

Without a will, a probate court will decide how to distribute your belongings. You could leave instructions instead of a will, but the court is not legally bound to follow them, and may actually be legally bound to act contrary to them.

Lower Taxes and the Cost of Probate

Probating a will is typically less expensive, less time-consuming and less complicated than probating an estate without a will. That is primarily because in a will you can name an executor who acts without a bond and without court supervision. Most estates are small enough to escape federal estate taxes, but if your estate is over $5 million, it is imperative that you see an experienced estate-planning attorney.

Decide Who Cares for Your Minor Children

If you do not have a will that specifies who you have chosen as guardian or guardians for your minor children, then the probate court, after listening to testimony of others, will make this decision. Your children could end up in the care of persons neither you nor they would choose. The most commonly chosen guardians are married couples who are family.

Establish a Trust for Your Children

Many people do not know that they can establish trusts for their children in their wills (whether minors or not). You can choose how old your children will be before the trustee distributes their share to them. Until the children reach that age, the trustee can use the assets of the trust to care for your children. Usually the trustee and the guardian are the same person or persons.

Protect Your Business

It is tragic when a family loses its source of business income and employees lose their jobs, because the business owner died without a plan for continuing the business. A good attorney can help a business owner with business continuity planning, and it starts with a well-drafted will.

SMOKE ALARMS - THE LAW

The Indiana State Fire Marshal is reminding Hoosiers that it is not only crucial to have a working smoke alarm in your home, but it is also the law (IC 22-11-18-3.5). Working smoke alarms can double the chances of surviving a residence fire.

Indiana had 47 fatalities in 2011 and 2012, due to either non-working smoke alarms or having no smoke alarms at all. This year Indiana has had 22 fatalities. "Smoke alarms save lives, and a working smoke alarm is the best insurance against becoming a casualty in a house fire," said Indiana State Fire Marshal James Greeson. "Firefighters too often find that in fatal fires, a home had smoke alarms but their batteries had been removed."

Most home-fire casualties occur at night when people are sleeping. The smoke and toxic gases generated by a fire can cause residents to sleep more deeply, making the chances of survival slimmer.

By Indiana law, all dwellings must have at least one functioning smoke alarm installed outside each sleeping area, and on each level of the building. The smoke alarms must be installed according to the manufacturer's instructions.

Marshal Greeson also recommends the following regarding smoke alarms:

- Test the alarms monthly and replace batteries at least once a year. If an alarm "chirps," it means the battery is low and should be replaced immediately.
- The smoke alarms themselves should be replaced every 10 years.
- For the best protection, interconnect all smoke alarms throughout the home – when one sounds, they all sound.
- Have a fire escape plan and practice it with your children.
- When the smoke alarm sounds, exit the home at once and meet at a set location.
- Call 9-1-1
- Once outside, stay outside.

Carbon Monoxide

Marshal Greeson also recommends having a carbon monoxide detector at home if any types of fuel (kerosene, wood, coal, natural gas, propane, oil, and methane) are used for heating or cooking.

Carbon monoxide is an odorless, colorless and nonirritating gas created when these fuels burn incompletely. It is the number one cause of accidental poisoning in the United States and can cause similar symptoms to the common cold or flu. Hoosiers should follow these recommendations for carbon monoxide detectors:

- Install in a central location at eye level close to, but not in, the same room as the furnace, water heater or any appliance that uses these fuels.
- Follow the manufacturer's instructions for placement and mounting height.
- Choose a CO alarm that has the label of a recognized testing laboratory.
- Call your local fire department's non-emergency number to find out what number to call if the CO alarm sounds.
- Test CO alarms at least once a month, replace them according to the manufacturer's instructions.

- If the CO alarm sounds, immediately move to a fresh air location outdoors or by an open window or door. Make sure everyone inside the home is accounted for. Call for help from a fresh air location and stay there until emergency personnel arrive.
- An indication of abnormal levels of carbon monoxide in the home may be nausea or a headache in the forehead area that gets better or goes away when you or a family member are at work or school, but then returns after hours of being back in the home.
- Never leave a running vehicle in the garage, even if the doors are open.

- During and after a snowstorm, make sure vents for the dryer, furnace, stove, and fireplace are clear of snow build-up.
- A generator should be used in a well-ventilated location outdoors away from windows, doors and vent openings.
- Gas or charcoal grills can produce CO – only use outside.

FINANCIAL RESOURCES

The normal events of the week can be enough of a struggle—getting the kids off to school, paying the bills, making sure you have dinner on the table, and lots of things in between. But when times are tough or you're facing unexpected expenses, caring for your family's needs can seem overwhelming. Use these tips from USA.gov's special Help for Difficult Financial Times section to find resources from the government that can make things a little easier:

- If you're having trouble with housing expenses, it's important to be able to spot scams and know how you can avoid foreclosure before it happens. There are also a variety of programs to help you stay in your home or find a temporary place to live.

- We all want healthy and happy families, but emergencies can come out of nowhere. Even if you don't have insurance, your family can still get medical care, including health care options in your local community.

- It can be hard to leave your little ones at daycare while you go off to work or are job hunting.

AUTISM AWARENESS

(BPT) - Each April for the past four decades, National Autism Awareness Month has elevated awareness among the children, parents and friends affected by autism spectrum disorders.

One in 88 children in the U.S. is affected by autism, Asperger's or Pervasive Developmental Disorder Not Otherwise Specified (PDD-NOS), estimated by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). In addition to these already staggering statistics, the CDC reports that one in every 98 African American children is diagnosed with autism with a 1.6 year delay in diagnosis when compared to white children.

Parents tend to overlook the early signs of autism spectrum disorders, assuming their child is "just going through a phase" or "having an off day." It is important that parents differentiate these assumptions from the symptoms, which can present in many different forms. Autism is a spectrum disorder, meaning that there can be great variation in the way it affects people. Each child on the autism spectrum possesses unique abilities, symptoms and challenges, according to autism expert Dr. Willis Holloway. However, many children on the spectrum often share common core symptoms. These include:

- * Impaired social interactions, such as reluctance to join group activities at school, not being aware of the needs of others, or inability to understand humor.

- * Impaired communication, such as delay in language development, unusual repetition of words and phrases spoken by others or on television, or major difficulty sustaining a conversation.

- * Restricted interests, repetitive behaviors, and stereotyped mannerisms, such as clapping, finger flicking, rocking, dipping, and swaying, fascination with parts of an object or preoccupation with one narrow interest such as dates or numbers.

While medications are available for some common behavioral symptoms like irritability or anxiety, there are no FDA-approved drugs to treat any of the core symptoms of these conditions. Autism is a disease with significant unmet patient needs.

The largest global clinical research program called ConnectMe is enrolling children with autism spectrum disorders worldwide to evaluate the safety, tolerability and effectiveness of an investigational drug on these core symptoms.

"Throughout my clinical and research experience, I have continued to stress the responsibility parents, pediatricians and teachers owe to their children to pay attention to the core symptoms of autism spectrum disorders. The earlier a diagnosis, the sooner supportive services and intervention can begin," Holloway says.

To learn more about ConnectMe or to take an online prescreening questionnaire to see if your child may be eligible to participate, visit www.ConnectMeTrial.com or call 877-900-8735.

wasting money and feel that you are worth it, you will get yourself one new outfit and a decent pair of lace-up shoes. You can save for them.

7. I don't have ENOUGH energy; Enough energy for what! To run a marathon? That is not what I am asking you to do. All I want is for you to start with a simple morning babystep routine and evening routine and to declutter 15 minutes a day. It does not have to all be done at one time.

8. I don't have ENOUGH Love; Well for once you may be right about this one. You want to get your home organized. You never dreamed that this column was more about your attitude toward yourself. You don't have ENOUGH self love! If I can teach you to FLY; Finally Love Yourself, then your home and life come together. Have you ever been on an airplane and heard the flight attendant tell you that if the oxygen masks come down to secure yours first before you help your child or others. When you give, give, give and don't save any for you then you are left wanting. If momma ain't happy then nobody's happy! Take care of yourself; If you don't do this then who will????

Are you ready to FLY with just ENOUGH?
