THANK YOU

We are all guilty of taking kindnesses for granted, sorry to say. After reading the Warren Weekly pages following our fabulous annual summer festival, I realized the hours of work that were involved in reporting all the contest winners, etc. etc. How many of us thanked our Editor for her gift to us? This is repeated week after week, at NO cost to us (unless we subscribed to help with her costs). So I, for one, extend heartfelt thanks and deepest appreciation of your priceless gift.

Sincerely, Lilly Nutter

Editors note: Thank you Lilly – you are a very special lady.

BREATHLESS CAN BE BEAUTIFUL

by V Neil Wyrick

There are, in each year, after all 12 months, 52 weeks or 365 days or 52 weeks or 525,600 minutes or 31,536, 000 seconds and these days we have a good chance of having close to 80 of them. (Actually I'm ahead of the game with a birthday coming up in September that will list me at 82)

Living a better life is possible and following some of the following rules may be a good place to begin.

Be thankful for friends and family and let them know it. They are after all a lifeline for emotional sanity as you are to them. Be your best. All of you need it.

Fall in love with beauty and stay that way. Beautiful thoughts, beautiful deeds; an appreciation of beauty in all its form. Ugly thoughts and ugly deeds do indeed make for an ugly life.

Labor well and without procrastination or laziness. You do not want to be bored or boring and you certainly don't want to waste your life.

Seek knowledge. Foolishness comes easily to all of us and ignorance assures we will have more of it.

Be content with small victories. Get over your love affair with bigness. If you achieve something big...congratulations...but just remember a thousand small and decent deeds end up making big improvements in this old world.

Never quit. Never quit. Never quit. Persistence is your friend. Quitting never is.

Trust people. It is hard these days but do it anyway until they give you a reason not to.

Give to others the gift of listening. We all are capable of talking too much and listening too little.

Just remember that..."Life is not measured by the number of breathes we take, but by the moments that take our breath away.." - ANONYMOUS

Please don't take your organs to heaven ...
Heaven knows we need 'em here!!

As you continue upstairs, in the Granger Electric Co. of 1911, the women assembled the electric toaster. The electric toaster was a simple piece of wrought nickel which provided a time saving convenience for the house wife. Its simple construction and operation, the neatness of its nickel surface, the dress red silk cord suggested completeness and luxury.

In the next room the warming pads and blankets were made. The warming pad took the place of the hot water bottle and was much superior because it never became too hot and was easy to handle. The infants sleeping blanket was a product that appealed to everyone. Back down stairs, in the back, there were six motors driving the lathes, drills, punches and many other machines which shaped the metal used in the products. Two men were in charge of electro-plating. About one hundred toasters were ready to ship every hour. In time the company closed and moved to Fort Wayne.

BAGWORMS

Many folks can easily recognize bagworms that appear on their trees and shrubs. Spindle-shaped bags that are formed by bagworms look like small Christmas ornaments. They are typically found on area pine, spruce and arborvitae (ie. Eastern red cedar) trees. These bags are formed from silken thread and foliage to protect the bagworms from birds and other natural enemies.

If you look closely at these bags during late July and August, you might see them moving around. Female bagworms will crawl part way out of the bags to feed on the foliage of trees. They will then disappear into the bags if disturbed. Note that each female bag can produce as many as 1000 bagworms (one generation per year).

bagworm eggs don't always survive the winter. It is clear, however, that bagworm feeding is occurring now from the samples which have been brought into the Huntington County Extension Office. Bags are now approximately 1 ½ inches long.

So, what can be done to control the bagworms if they are found feeding on your trees? It is first important to understand the extent of the damage being caused by the bagworms. When the worms initially emerge in early June, they can almost be unnoticeable without the aid of a magnifying glass. In some cases it may take a couple years before any noticeable foliage damage from bagworm feeding is seen in trees.

While university specialists say that the time to treat bagworm-infested trees is in May or June to achieve the best results, it is possible to spray the trees with a "rescue" treatment of products such as carbaryl (Sevin). A Purdue Extension publication containing a complete list of pesticides available for fighting bagworms is available at <http://extension.entm.purdue.edu/publications/E-27.pdf>.

Remember to read the label before applying pesticides to control bagworms. Some of the soil-applied products are not effective to control bagworms when applied in the summer. All pesticides are most effective when bags are still small. Additionally, rescue treatments of some pesticides can harm beneficial insects. Researchers are also finding that other problems such as mite outbreaks can occur when there are fewer beneficial insects around.

It is important to note that when bagworms mature in late August and early September the bags are about 2 inches long and they can longer be killed by pesticides. The males will then eventually emerge after they have formed wings and fly about in search of females.

A good resource for additional information concerning the life cycle and control of bagworms can be found in an Ohio State Extension publication called "Bagworm and Its Control" (<http://ohioline.osu.edu/hyg-fact/2000/2149.html>).

For more information, contact Ed Farris, Agriculture and Natural Resource Educator, Purdue Extension—Huntington County Office, 354 N Jefferson—Suite 202, Huntington by calling 260-358-4826.

RULES CHANGE

The Indiana Natural Resources Commission gave preliminary approval yesterday to a comprehensive package of proposed changes to deer-hunting rules in Indiana.

The DNR Division of Fish and Wildlife developed the rules proposal to focus deer-herd reduction in a strategically targeted manner to more adequately balance the ecological, recreational and economic needs of the state's citizens.

Key points of the proposal include:

—Changing the deer firearms season to nine days beginning the Saturday before Thanksgiving

—Adding a two-day antlerlessonly firearms season in October in designated counties

—Adding a statewide antlerless-only firearms season from Dec. 25 to Jan. 1

—Shortening the muzzleloader season to nine days

—Extending the urban zone season through Jan. 31

—Expanding the use of crossbows

—Requiring hunters to take at least one antlerless deer prior to taking an antlered deer in an urban deer zone

"For the last several years, Indiana deer management and associated deer rules were designed to stabilize or slightly grow the deer herd," said Mitch Marcus, wildlife section chief for the DNR Division of Fish and Wildlife. "We are now experiencing record-setting harvests, record numbers of deer damage complaints, constituent complaints to legislators, and record numbers of deer-vehicle collisions. The intent of this deer rule proposal is to move Indiana toward a focused, strategically targeted deer-herd reduction."

Hunters have harvested more than 100,000 deer in the state in 15 of the last 17 years, topping 125,000 in four of the last five years, including a record 132,752 in 2009.

Further changes would add a new nonresident youth deer license, add license requirements for the new special antlerless seasons, add requirements to the use of ground blinds, allow a rifle cartridge to have a maximum case length of 1.8 inches instead of 1.625 inches, and require youth hunters to wear hunter orange during the youth special season.

A complete summary of the proposed changes is at <http://www.in.gov/dnr/fishwild/2362.htm>

The NRC's preliminary approval moves the proposed changes into the public input phase of the rules-making process. Comments on the proposal can be submitted online at www.IN.gov/nrc; by mail to Division of Hearings, Indiana Government Center North, 100 North Senate Ave., Indianapolis, IN, 46204; or at public hearings. Dates and locations for a minimum two hearings will be announced at a later date.

After the public input process is complete, the NRC will consider final adoption of the rule package.

If adopted, the new rules would take effect in 2011 and would be evaluated over a five-year period to determine if the intended result of reducing the deer herd is being achieved. Success will be measured through maintaining an annual deer harvest sex ratio of 60/40 (females/males), landowner and deer-hunter survey responses, reduction in county antlerless quotas, and reduction in deer-vehicle accident rates.

The proposed changes to deer-hunting rules are a result of the NRC Advisory Council's Comprehensive Fish and Wildlife Rules Enhancement Project and a DNR review of Indiana deer management. The NRAC project drew more than 1,000 suggestions from the public, and the DNR review included discussions with representatives from several stakeholder groups—Indiana Sportsman's Roundtable, Indiana Wildlife Federation, Indiana Deer Hunters Association, Indiana Bowhunters Association, Quality Deer Management Association, The Nature Conservancy, Indiana Farm Bureau, Bloomington City Council, Indiana Forestry and Woodland Owners Association, and a sporting goods retailer.

Leaders or representatives of the Roundtable, IWF, IDHA, IBA, QDMA, The Nature Conservancy and Indiana Farm Bureau spoke in support of the proposed rule changes at Tuesday's NRC meeting.

"We are pleased with the amount of public input given through the Comprehensive Fish and Wildlife Rule Enhancement Project and the agency review of deer management with stakeholder groups," Marcus said. "We look forward to additional public input as part of the rule-making process."

SENIOR SCAM

No matter what anyone on the phone might say, seniors on Medicare don't have to do anything to receive their $250 rebate check for hitting the "doughnut hole," the gap in prescription drug coverage.

The Indiana Association of Area Agencies on Aging (IAAAA) warns Indiana seniors not to fall victim to scams taking place in Michigan and other states.

"Scammers are calling or visiting seniors to say they need personal information, such as a Social Security or Medicare number, and/or a signature to process the rebate checks. They don't," says Tamra Simpson, program director for SMP (also known as Senior Medicare Patrol). "Seniors should never, ever, give their Social Security or their Medicare number to anyone over the phone, and no forms are needed for these rebates."

The checks are being mailed automatically by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) as soon as seniors become eligible. No action on the consumer's part is required.

President Obama announced the rebates, the first step in eliminating the coverage gap under the Affordable Health Care Act, in late May; checks began going out in June and will be mailed every 30 days as seniors reach the gap. To be eligible, a senior must already have Medicare prescription drug coverage and must not be on the Medicare Extra Help program.

For more information about how the Affordable Health Care Act will affect seniors, they should visit www.healthcare.gov.

The rebate checks will come in an envelope bearing the HHS logo. The return address may be of a contractor hired to conduct the mailings. HHS estimates 4 million Americans will receive the tax-free rebates.

Other scams to watch out for: Lie: Callers telling seniors they need new Medicare cards because of the new Affordable Health Care Act.

Fact: Seniors need do nothing to receive any benefits of the Affordable Health Care Act.

Lie: Insurance agents claiming that the new health care law requires seniors to change their health care benefits plans, including Part D plans.

Fact: The Affordable Care Act gives seniors more control over their health care choices. No senior is required to make any changes to their Medicare plans. For legitimate information about how the new health care law affects seniors, they should visit www.healthcare.gov.

Lie: An insurance salesman mailed a "release form" to his policyholders that authorized him to make medical decisions for them.

Fact: Never sign a form until you're sure you completely understand its contents; take nothing for granted. Contact a trusted source or your localSHIP (State Health Insurance Assistance Program) office; in Indiana, call 1-800-452-4800 (TDD 1-866-846-0139).

Lie: Callers claiming to represent Medicare and asking for seniors' Medicare numbers.

Fact: Medicare will never call and ask for anyone's Medicare number. If you receive such a call, take the person's name, write down the number he or she is calling from (use your caller ID, if possible), and report the call to 1-800-MEDICARE.

The IAAAA urges patients not to release any Medicare or personal information and to be aware of this and similar scams. If you have received a call similar to this or suspect Medicare fraud of any kind, please contact the IAAAA at 800-986-3505.

CANNER TESTING

Purdue University Cooperative Extension Service of Wells County will be offering a Pressure Canner Testing session on Monday, August 2nd from 4:00-7:00 PM in the meeting rooms at the Wells County Community Center at the 4-H Park.

Pressure canning is the only recommended method for canning meat, poultry, seafood and vegetables. Using boiling water canners for these low-acid foods poses a real risk of botulism poisoning. The USDA recommends a dial gauge pressure canner be checked once a season for accuracy.

The Extension Service will check the dial gauge and lid for $3.00. If you bring in the whole dial gauge canner, a full canner assessment can be made for $5.00. This is the last scheduled pressure canner testing session for the summer.

Contact the Wells County Office of the Purdue University Cooperative Extension at 8:00 AM to 4:30 PM if you have any questions.

ONE BITE AT A TIME

by The FlyLady, Marla Cilley
It is so much easier to clean in a room without clutter. Don't get overwhelmed by all the clutter; 15 minutes a day over what you do in your routines. I know you don't think this is going to work, but I promise that those 15 minutes of concentrated decluttering every day will make a difference in your home and your attitude. It is the consistency of eating the elephant one bite at a time that will slowly make the whole elephant disappear.

I have a story to tell you about my Sweet Darling. He is the king of the one bite rule. Several years ago he had a British Sports car; an MG. In fact the car was always being worked on. After a minor car accident the MG was totaled. So he bought a second car the same model for parts. He is pretty good at fixing anything. It took both cars to keep just one running. He was left with only the stripped down parts car. Over an entire summer, he systematically cut that car (with a hack saw) into dinner plate sized parts and sent it to the landfill one plate at a time. It was his goal to do something to dismantle this car each day. At the end of the summer he was finished. It was almost therapy for my sweetie: the car had betrayed him. That car was a pain and he got rid of it one bite at a time. Beware of the anger of a patient man.

The reason I mentioned this story, is because in our impatience to see our homes clean, we over-do. Then we get overwhelmed and we QUIT. I want you to do a little every day and not crash and burn: BabySteps, 15 minutes of decluttering and consistency will be the keys to your clean home and your peace.

If you are not being consistent with your routines, even small ones, then you are not going to have your goal of a clean and peaceful home. This hit and miss attitude is what got your home in a mess to start with. You clean like a banshee for two days because of guests, and then when they leave, you let things go to pot because you are worn to a frazzle.

This has got to stop; I want you to enjoy your home, your family and your guests. You can't do this if you are exhausted. I want your pledge to stop, "crisis cleaning". That you will commit to doing your routines DAILY, and that you will spend 15 minutes decluttering each day.

I am not the drill sergeant that many of you think I am. I don't spend all day cleaning. Even when I was decluttering I only did 15 minutes a day. I used the 27 Fling Boogie to declutter our home. It was almost as if I didn't clean at all. After three months of decluttering every day and doing my routines, our home became a paradise, instead of the pig sty that it was. Every morning and walk into a clean and shining home and it is still a big shock and a GOME moment for me. I would walk into my clean kitchen and just smile. Some of you know what I am talking about. It is a pleasure to not be greeted by mystery water and yesterday's dirty dishes and feel like you are behind before you even make your coffee.

I want you to smile when you walk into your kitchen each morning. Visualize your clean and peaceful home. Let go of your perfectionism and impatience and take baby steps. You can do this; if you will just eat this elephant one bite at a time.

JOB OPPORTUNITIES

BOOMING IN HEALTH CARE

(ARA) - In these times of financial uncertainty, many Americans are unemployed and facing increased competition for fewer jobs. One industry consistently reported as growing is health care.

Not all health care workers are directly involved in patient care. According to explorehealthcareers.org, a website dedicated to explaining the many health care career options available, "allied health care" is an umbrella term that covers more than 200 careers, employing people with skills in many different areas. Employment options in this growing industry range from doctors and nurses to office managers and insurance coders, to phlebotomists and nutritionists.

What's more, most health care employment opportunities require less than four years of college. Ronette Messer, allied health instructor at Brown Mackie College -- Merrillville, Indiana, helps students of all ages prepare to seek employment in health care. "Allied health careers are wide open today," says Messer.

Every career track in the health care industry requires the ability to work with others. "Teamwork is critically important for health care professionals to work as a cohesive unit," says Messer. Employees must have good communication skills, be open to constructive criticism, and keep an open mind to learn different techniques. "An open mind is important to success in the industry," says Messer.
