BECOME AN OUTDOORS WOMAN

Registration for the annual Becoming an Outdoors-Woman (BOW) workshop, which is open to women ages 18 and older, opens March 1.

This year's BOW workshop will be held May 5-7, at Ross Camp in West Lafayette.

The BOW program is designed for women to learn outdoor skills in a relaxed, low-pressure environment. Participants will choose four activities from more than two dozen offerings, including fishing, archery, geocaching, wild edibles, wildlife tracking, shooting muzzleloader guns, and outdoor cooking.

The workshop is for women who have never tried these activities, but have hoped for an opportunity to learn; who have tried them but are beginners hoping to improve; or who know how to do some of the activities, but would like to try new ones. Women who enjoy the camaraderie of individuals with similar outdoor interests and who seek time away to reconnect with nature are also prime candidates for BOW.

Registration, which closes when there are 100 registrants, can be done at IndianaBOW.com. The cost for the workshop is $275, which includes all equipment, meals, and lodging.

NEW FAMILY DR AT

PARKVIEW

Stephanie Flaig-Miller, DO, has joined Parkview Physicians Group – Family Medicine and is welcoming patients at her office in the John B. Kay Medical Office Building adjacent to Parkview Huntington Hospital.

"It's been a pleasure to welcome Dr. Flaig-Miller to Huntington," says Doug Selig, president of Parkview Huntington Hospital. "Patients will really appreciate her warmth and caring, in addition to her technical knowledge. Families looking to build a relationship with a primary care provider will find her a wonderful partner for their healthcare."

Dr. Flaig-Miller, who grew up near Huntington and was raised in Marion, is happy to be settling into her practice in what feels like familiar territory.

"Huntington reminds me of my hometown," she said, "with a strong sense of community and people who appreciate having a relationship with a local medical provider. Having spent half my childhood in the city limits and the other half living next to cornfields, I came to really appreciate the diverse community I grew up with. I see this diverse community in Huntington and am enjoying getting to know my patients, their families and the community. I am also excited to be part of the family medicine group providing care for inpatient pediatric patients and newborns at Parkview Huntington Hospital."

Flaig-Miller completed her residency in family medicine through the Fort Wayne Medical Education Program. She earned her Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine degree from Marian University College of Osteopathic Medicine in Indianapolis.

Prior to medical school, she received her bachelor's and master's degrees in biology from Indiana University Purdue University at Indianapolis (IUPUI). She received graduate student research awards from both IUPUI and the Indiana Physiological Society.

During graduate school, Flaig-Miller worked in research at several institutions, including IUPUI, where she was a research technician investigating therapies to treat polycystic kidney disease. An author of several research papers and abstracts, she also served a medical school internship at Eli Lilly and Company, working in the study of diabetes.

While she started out spending much of her time in laboratories, she ultimately decided to follow a different path and become a primary care provider.

"I have always enjoyed biology, with my early education focusing on research in cellular and then animal studies," she said. "While rewarding, this experience emphasized how much I valued human social interaction. A family physician has the unique privilege of getting to know each patient and their families on an individual level. No two patients are the same, and becoming a

As most of you know I am a sucker for a good peanut butter cookie. They are my favorite or should I say anything with peanut butter is my favorite.

When we were in Pennsylvania for a truck jamboree we made it an extra long trip and took in the Hershey factory along with the Amish communities. We stopped by a flea market and they had lots of baked goods available for purchase and they had made Amish Whoopie Pies in all kinds of flavors. We bought 3, a chocolate chip, a chocolate and the peanut butter. I was in heaven with the peanut butter one. I told John we needed to go back, but we ended up at the jamboree for the rest of the time so I didn't get any more peanut butter whoopie pies. I have not attempted at home to try to make them but I do have a good peanut butter cookie recipe that I think just might do the trick with a little cream filling between them.

This recipe came from Opal Hardin in the red Salamonie Summer Festival cookbook that came out in the 80's. They are a little drier than most cookies but they simply melt in your mouth. I've made these cookies multitudes of times, I have even received blue ribbons with this recipe. Thinking pretty hard about making them for the state fair this year. So here is the recipe and if you get the chance to make them, eat a couple for me.

PEANUT BUTTER- BUTTER COOKIES

|----------------------------|---------------------|
| 1 stick of butter, soft | 1 egg |
| 1 c. peanut butter, creamy | 1 ½ c. flour |
| ½ c. sugar | ¾ tsp soda |
| ½ c. brown sugar | ½ tsp baking powder |
| ½ tsp vanilla | ¼ tsp salt |

Cream together butter and peanut butter. Add the sugars and cream together until light and fluffy. Add vanilla and the egg and beat well. Stir in flour, soda, baking powder, and salt. Mix thoroughly. Chill dough. Shape into balls and place 2 inches apart on a baking sheet. Flatten with a fork in a crisscross pattern. Bake 375 for 10-12 minutes.

Notes: be sure you use real butter not margarine and I have skipped the chill part and put them straight in the oven and they work just fine. You can add about a half bag of peanut butter chips to this recipe too.

Flaig-Miller is a member of the Fort Wayne Medical Society and the Indiana State Medical Association.

As a DO, she has been trained to take a whole-person approach to caring for patients of all ages and from all walks of life. She is also able to provide osteopathic manipulation treatments to treat various musculoskeletal disorders and other medical issues. In addition, she describes herself as passionate about women's health and the health of infants and young children.

"Having young children myself," she said, "I can relate to the many unique challenges women face, including motherhood. From aspiring mothers to post-delivery and beyond, I enjoy helping my patients through this beautiful journey."

A believer in the power of voluntarism, she has had many volunteer interests over the years, both during her time in Indianapolis and since her return to the greater Fort Wayne area.

"As each of our lives develops, so our area of volunteer focus changes in our communities," she said. "In the past, my volunteer activities focused on educating children and teens about science and medicine through state and university science fairs, supporting women who were victims of violence through The Julian Center, and helping to screen and treat animals for the Indianapolis Humane Society. Currently, outside of the clinic, being a mom is my joy. Volunteering at my children's school, and staying involved in their lives as much as possible, is very important to me. As they get a bit older, I look forward to getting involved in the broader community again."

Flaig-Miller also enjoys tennis and swimming and creative activities such as painting. She hopes to be able to spend more time on them and share them with her growing children.

TIPS FOR NURSES STRUGGLING WITH THEIR MENTAL HEALTH

(StatePoint) While the worst of the pandemic is behind us, if you're a nurse, you know its effects live on. Ongoing staffing shortages spurred by pandemic-related layoffs and resignations have created conditions in many healthcare settings that are untenable for workers, inspiring nurses in some areas of the country to go on strike.

In this climate of high stress and tension, anxiety, depression and burnout are common, but industry experts say that if you're a nurse experiencing these mental health issues, there are steps you can take to feel better, including rethinking the way you deliver self-care and care for your patients.

"Nursing is largely about caring for others, but it's important to take time each day to focus on your own wellness," says Jennifer Sheets, president and chief executive officer of Interim Healthcare Inc. "While many traditional nursing jobs aren't able to offer the amount of time and space needed to recharge with self-care, careers in the home healthcare industry offer flexibility, good work-life balance and great job satisfaction."

In an Interim Healthcare Inc. survey, 71% of licensed medical professionals reported that the COVID-19 pandemic has led them to consider a career shift to home healthcare as a way to reconnect with why they got into healthcare in the first place. Fortunately for patients and nurses alike, the home healthcare field is growing in size and scope. Once associated primarily with senior care, it now extends to many other facets of care -- from caring for acute illnesses like COVID-19, to complex medical care for children, to specialized care for chronic diseases, dementia and hospice. In fact, much of the technology and clinical capabilities of the hospital are available at home, making home care possible for more patients, and ultimately allowing for more nurses to make the switch.

Beyond rethinking your role in the nursing industry, Sheets offers these additional mental wellness tips:

- * Understand the symptoms of mental health issues, like anxiety, depression and burnout. If you are living with these issues, talk to a trusted friend or family member about what you're experiencing and consider addressing your concerns with a mental health professional. Telehealth is making it easier to fit counseling or therapy into a weekly schedule, particularly one that changes from week to week.

- * While depression and anxiety can feel lonely, know that you're not alone. Other nurses are feeling the same way right now. Lean on colleagues for support.

- * Implement activities around self-care and set aside time for yourself. Breathing exercises, meditation and yoga can be powerful stress relievers, and studies consistently show that even just a few minutes of regular moderate or vigorous exercise can reduce your risk of depression.

- * Simplify daily tasks to ease mental health symptoms. Whether it's relying on apps to help you check off items on your to-do list, or being more realistic about the social commitments you make, there are many ways to ensure your life outside of work doesn't unduly add to your stress.

- * Look for job opportunities that will make you happier. Those in home healthcare let you make your own schedule, match you with assignments that fit your needs and preferences, and offer variety, support, flexibility and better nurse-to-patient ratios. To explore these benefits, visit careers.interimhealthcare.com.

During the ongoing challenges plaguing the nursing industry, it's important to focus on your wellness. Doing so can help you get back to focusing on making a difference in the lives of your patients.

SPRING CLEANING: DON'T TOSS THAT 'JUNK,' IT MAY BE VALUABLE!

(StatePoint) It's time to hit the garage, basement, attic and closets for that age-old task of spring cleaning! Before hauling unwanted possessions to the curb, you may be surprised to learn they might be valuable -- especially if you have sports cards and memorabilia gathering dust.

With prices of sports cards rising in recent years, take time to determine if yours are valuable and how to best sell them.

"Older sports cards and memorabilia aren't just highly collectible; they can be worth lots of money. Recent sales of scarce vintage cards have topped anywhere from thousands of dollars to tens of thousands, even hundreds of thousands. And really rare cards can go higher," says Al Crisafulli, Auction Director at Love of the Game Auctions, an internet sports auction house that helps families identify and sell valuable items.

Crisafulli has assisted people in selling such keepsakes as a grandparent's autograph collection and an uncle's childhood baseball cards, for tens of thousands of dollars. In one life-changing event, he helped a family determine that a baseball bat that spent decades protecting their home was used by Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig -- and Love of the Game Auctions sold it for almost half a million dollars. Today, that bat could bring more than a million dollars.

The key is understanding what makes old sports collectibles valuable. To help, Crisafulli is sharing some tips:

Older is Usually Pricier

Cards from the 1960s and earlier are collectible, and those from before the 1940s can be worth a lot of money, especially those depicting stars. Do you have cards of Hall of Famers, such as Mickey Mantle, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner or Ty Cobb? Even non-stars from the early days of a sport can be worth big bucks, especially if the cards have no creases and retain sharp corners and original gloss.

If you have very old cards from the 1880s through the 1930s, look for tobacco, gum and candy brands, such as Old Judge, Piedmont, Sweet Caporal, Goudey or American Caramel.

If you want to sell sports items for the most money, consider a specialty auction, such as Love of the Game, which has the expertise to properly research sports ephemera and maintains bidder lists of collectors specializing in sports. More information is available at loveofthegameauctions.com.

Postcards and Photographs

We all have keepsakes of vacation destinations, but most aren't valuable. However, photographs and postcards depicting sports stars and ballparks can be significant. Look for early "real photo" postcards from the 1900s through the 1940s, which are photographs printed on postcard backs.

As with sports cards, star power matters, so preserve those Babe Ruths as opposed to images of your great grandma's baby cousin once-removed. And when it comes to photos, look for old markings on the back, such as photographer, publication and date stamps.

Memorabilia

Set aside old advertising posters depicting sports stars and food, tobacco or sporting goods brands. Ads from magazines aren't valuable, but those used as store displays and for other marketing purposes can be pricey. Tin signs from the 1960 and earlier can be highly prized, but reproductions aren't.

Your family's sporting goods, such as balls, gloves and bats, can be valuable. Pre-1950s uniforms and catcher's masks, helmets and other equipment are highly collected, especially when endorsed by star players. Top condition brings the highest prices, but even used equipment can be valuable.

"The golden rule is the older the sports card or item, the more valuable it usually is. Pre-1975 pieces start to get interesting and are worth researching," says Crisafulli.

Don't just clean out your closet this spring, examine it closely to potentially maximize its value.
