FEBRUARY IS HEART MONTH

Inflammation could turn out to be worse than cholesterol for heart Large studies at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School lead researchers to believe that inflammation is a central factor in cardiovascular disease. It can be twice as bad as cholesterol as a cause of heart disease. The studies support earlier research with men.

Painless inflammation can be measured with a test that checks for Creactive protein, or CRP, a chemical necessary for fighting injury and infection. The test costs about $20, and may become part of standard physical exams for middle-aged people, especially those with other conditions that increase their risk of heart trouble.

Exercising and losing weight can lower CRP dramatically. Cholesterollowering drugs also reduce CRP, as do aspirin and some other medicines.

Doctors believe inflammation has many possible sources. The fatty buildups that line blood vessels become inflamed as white blood cells invade in a misguided defense attempt. Fat cells are also known to turn out inflammatory proteins. Other possible triggers include high blood pressure, smoking, and lingering low-level infections such as chronic gum disease.

CRP levels may rise for 25 to 30 years before a person suffers a heart attack or stroke. That gives a good window of opportunity in terms of prevention.

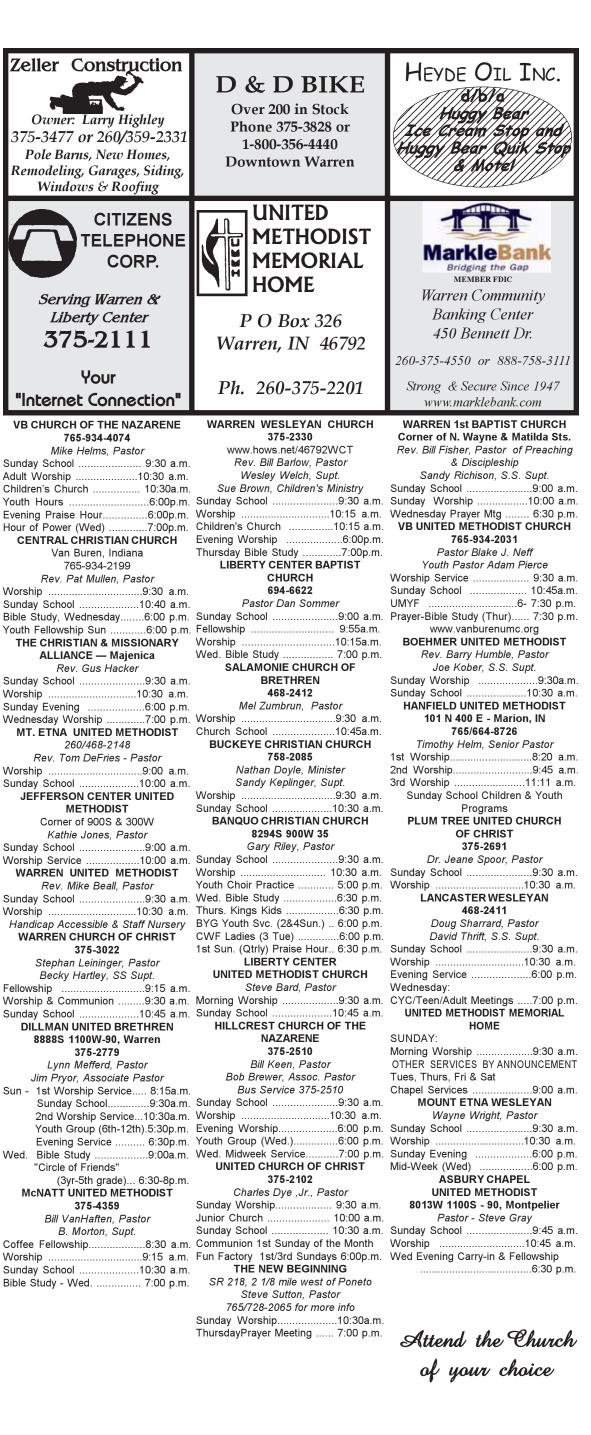

To live longer, work that body

Exercise can help to prevent cardiovascular disease. Increasing your level of activity decreases the risk of death.

It also reduces the risk of developing conditions that often lead to heart disease, such as diabetes and hypertension. It can lower blood pressure among people with hypertension. It can prevent obesity through weight loss and weight control. Obesity is now well known as an independent risk factor for the development of heart disease.

Recent studies reported in the New England Journal of Medicine show that physical fitness may be even more important to health than quitting smoking or avoiding diabetes. People with the greatest capacity of exercise live the longest, according to the studies.

The USS Salamonie was the most completely armed of her class. She also ranked third in longevity of any ship, behind Old Ironsides and the New Jersey, with 28 years of sea life. Some information can be found on the Internet but before long, those of us in this and the surrounding communities will be able to travel to the Knight Civic Center to learn more about this important part of history.

EDITOR'S REQUEST

With the coming of the USS Salamonie it has been brought to the foreground that our veterans are all aging and stories and mementos may be lost in time. To help alleviate this situation I would like to call on everyone in the community to take the time to ask, listen and tell the stories about life in the military. Write those stories and thoughts down, they don't have to be long, and I will compile them to put into the museum to pass on to the younger generations. Send your stories to the Warren Weekly, PO Box 695, Warren, IN 46792, or email them to me at wwkly@citznet.com, or fax 375-7007 or even drop them off at PJ's Flower & Gift Shop in the Warren Weekly. Or, if any of those suggestions won't work, call me at 375-3531 and I'll come pick them up. The stories don't have to be written either, I'll take them on cassette tape recordings also and transcribe them. This information is just too important to lose and our vounger generations need to know of the heroes among us.

SAFETY A PRIORITY

With an increase in motor vehicles on Indiana roadways it's important to remember that passengers need to be buckled up, especially children.

Between February 9 and February 15, Huntington County wide law enforcement will be participatiny in the national Child Passenger Safety Week. During the week the goal of officers is to increase awareness of the need to restrain children in an appropriate safety seat until age eight. All children who have outgrown child safety seats should be properly restrained in booster seats until they are at least eight years old, unless they are 4-feet 9inches tall.

"Our challenge and our priority is to deliver the message to parents and caregivers that children need to be buckled up properly when they are in a vehicle," said Deputy Carter Horne. "Far too many children are not in a child safety seat or properly buckled up. Seat belts are made for adults. For children under age eight and under 4-feet 9-inches tall a booster seat should be used to help insure that the seat belt fits, preventing the child from being thrown from the car in a crash."

Small children, aged 2 to 5, who are placed in seat belts rather than child safety seats or booster seats are 3.5 times more likely to be significantly injured in a crash. They are also four times more likely to receive a significant head injury, According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, more than half (56%) of all children under 15 years old killed in car crashes in 2000 were completely unrestrained. Huntington countywide law enforcement is working hard to get the word out to Indiana drivers, parents and caregivers that all children should be placed in child safety seats, booster seats or seat belts every time they ride in a car or truck to help decrease the number of child injuries associated with car crashes

"Child safety seats reduce fatal injury by 71 percent for infants and by 54 percent for toddlers in passenger cars," stated Horne. Parents need to know the facts to secure their children properly. As children grow, they should progress through three types of child safety seats before using a seat belt alone: from rear-facing seats to forward-facing seats to booster seats."

Beginning Feb. 23, the Huntington County Sheriffs Dept., Huntington City Police Dept. and the Warren Police Dept. will increase enforcement efforts and be looking for seat belt and child passenger restraint violators.

The Governor's Council on Impaired & Dangerous Driving, a division of the Indiana Criminal Justice Institute, is working with local law enforcement agencies to make Hoosier roadways safe for children by educating parents and caregivers about the importance of properly securing small children.

Consumer Protection Week The Postal Inspection Service and the Consumer Advocate's Office have joined other federal, state and local organizations, as well as national advocacy groups to launch the fifth annual National Consumer Protection Week (NCPW).

The US Postal Service has taken this year's subject, Information Security, one step further by sending consumers the message "Identity Theft — Safeguard Your Personal Information." This year's national campaign focuses on educating consumers about identity theft and information security as well as providing tips to prevent consumers from becoming potential victims. Every year, thousands of people and businesses are victimized by identity theft schemes. We are encouraging consumers to be aware and be educated. February 3-8 has been designated as the official week dedicated to promote consumer protection awareness efforts

While it is impossible for consumers to protect themselves from every swindler, there are actions that can be taken to substantially minimize the risk of identity theft. Consumers can take the following steps.

Promptly remove all mail from the mailbox after delivery.

Never give personal information over the telephone, such as social security number, date of birth, mother's maiden name, credit card number, or bank personal identification number (PIN) code, unless you initiated the phone call.

Shred pre-approved credit card applications, credit card receipts, bills, and other financial information you don't want before disposing in the trash or recycling bin.

Order a recent credit card report from the three major credit bureaus once a year to check for fraudulent activity or other discrepancies.

Sign all new credit cards immediately upon receipt.

Report all lost or stolen credit cards immediately.

Use caution when you disclose account numbers, credit card numbers, or other personal financial data on any web site or online service location unless you receive a secured authentication key from the provider.

"Information Security," a significant evolving issue for consumers, was designated as this year's National Consumer Protection Week leading topic by the partnering organizations. Security is at the heart of the Postal Service brand. Over its 226-year history, the United States Postal Service has developed a tradition of trust, valued by the American people, by delivering the mail with the highest levels of privacy and integrity.

As the children entered into the library they received their name tag bear to wear around their neck. We sang the open shut them finger play song. Karen had prepared a mixed - up alphabet on the easel. As the children sang the alphabet song they knew something was wrong. They would laugh as they explained the correct letter was not where it was suppose to be. They know their ABC song really well and I could not fool them. We had a lot of fun. Karen read the book "Alphaboat" by Michael Chesworth. They were able to take a picture home of an eel to color with a work sheet on the back about the letter E. They each checked out two books to take and enjoy.
