Thought for the Week: [Sleep is] the golden chain that ties health and our bodies together. Thomas Dekker

NEW WOUND HEALING TECHNOLOGY

Two giant, plastic-wrapped presents arrived via semi-truck last week for delivery to Parkview Huntington Hospital (PHH). Each one took several men to maneuver it slowly off the truck and guide it carefully through the front door of the new Parkview Huntington Center for Wound Healing.

When the wrappings were peeled away, they revealed two treasures: shiny, transparent hyperbaric oxygen chambers that represent a key feature of the new center, which will open to patients on Tuesday, December 18.

Hyperbaric oxygen therapy, also known as HBO therapy, involves the use of greater-than-normal air pressure to suffuse the body's tissues with pure oxygen, which stimulates the natural healing process. This therapy can provide tremendous improvement in stubborn, chronic wounds that have not healed following standard treatment.

"HBO therapy can make a huge difference in quality of life for people who have been struggling with truly unpleasant wounds," says Juli Johnson, president, PHH. "We're really excited to be able to offer this state-of-the-art wound care treatment locally, so Huntington County residents won't have to travel far."

HBO therapy can be used to treat more than a dozen medical conditions, including: diabetic foot wounds, radiation injuries to tissue and bone, necrotizing infections, compromised skin grafts and skin flaps, some types of arterial insufficiency and ischemia. Most patients receive between 30 and 40 treatment sessions, depending on their condition and the judgment of the supervising physician.

During each two-hour session, the patient relaxes on a comfortable bed inside the see-through, pressurized

SALAMONIE STUDENTS ARE AWESOME

Thank you Salamonie school students, teachers, and parents of students for your faithful support of Bread of Life Food Pantry. Your collection of non perishable items filled the pantry shelves. This large donation will help so many families in Warren and surrounding area prepare nutritious meals for their families this winter.

Thank you for caring, and helping the pantry fill it's mission. Neighbors helping Neighbors..

We wish each of you a Blessed Christmas and a wonderful New Year.

The Volunteers of Bread of Life Food Pantry

Well the day is coming that I finally turn 50. Not to sure I like the thought but I keep reminding myself I'll be closer to retirement. There is good things that come with "50" such as AARP cards and elderly discounts. As most of you know I'm always out for a good bargain, so discounts are my thing.

In my 50 years, I've seen a lot. I lived thru nine presidents, man on the moon, Woodstock, Charles Manson, and Watergate. Gas at one time was 35 cents a gallon but spiked as high as 5.00 a gallon. NASA and their missions and their traumatic events, terrorist attacks, missile attacks and middle east wars. Bombing, assassinations, and mass shootings. Tornado outbreaks, hurricanes, earthquakes, and forest fires. HBO, epic movies, VHS tapes and DVD's. Pac-man, Atari game systems to Roblox and Minecraft. Mash, Hee-Haw, The Dukes of Hazard and who could forget Who Shot J.R. The new millennium and all the panic. Sony Walkmans, boomboxes, and now Alexa play me some music and the day that the King of Rock n Roll died. Miner strikes and truckers strikes, the bombing of the World Trade Center not once but twice. Ebay, Amazon, YouTube, and Google. Blizzards, floods and mudslides. West Nile, mad cows, bird flu and aids. Artificial hearts and test tube babies and a hopeful cure of cancer. Bill Gates, Princess Diana, Michael Jackson and OJ Simpson.

Many things can happen in just a short time. Take the good with the bad and the happy with the sad. Life is to short to sweat the small stuff, just take it one day at a time.

I appreciate all the comments on my articles I've been writing, I enjoy sharing my life with you. Sometimes its good and sometimes not so good but the last 50 years have been great and I wouldn't change it for anything. Have a great week and I'm looking forward to the next couple of weeks, my favorite holiday of the year, Christmas.

The motion was approved unanimously.

Council approved, by consensus, to approve use of Tower Park for a softball tournament on November 3rd.

At 3 p.m. on Tuesday, the marshal checked with the bank and they closed on schedule. As the marshal crossed the street that 12-year-old boy shouted, "I just saw him again." He said he saw him in the other alley. The marshal hurried to the alley, turned in, and saw a man standing by a car back behind the stores.

Marshal Wilson walked up to the man and asked his name and business in Warren. He said his name was Jim Beady of Marion and that he worked for the National Vault Company. Marshal Wilson asked if he could come to the office, so he could check him out. Once at the office Wilson called the county sheriff's office and gave them the information. They said they would check him out and call back. The stranger said he was hungry and said he would be back. The marshal said he'd better stay the there.

The stranger made a quick movement and came up holding a small pistol in his hand. The movement was totally unexpected, and Wilson was taken by surprise. The gunman started giving orders. He first ordered the marshal to change shirts with him, then he took the marshals gun, took him back to the jail and locked him up.

Max Ellerman, an automobile dealer, walked into the office and was surprised to see the man at the desk and the marshal in jail. The stranger put Ellerman in jail with the marshal. It was getting close to 5 p.m. when he unlocked the jail and order the two men go out to the police car.

They headed north on state road 5. The stranger was in the back and the other two was in front. They ended up in Huntington and the stranger said park in front of this store and we will go in for coffee. That was something new thought Wilson. A coffee break during a kidnapping. Wilson was able to tell the waitress he was kidnapped, but she went and told the stranger. The stranger said they were his prisoners and they were getting ready to leave. After a few minutes they headed south toward Warren. More next week.

FFA DONATES

The Southern Wells FFA Chapter recently donated fruit to the "Feeding Tomorrow's Future Today" weekend food packs for hungry kids in Wells County. The fruit was from the chapters annual fruit sale fundraiser held each fall.

The program is coordinated by Wells County 4-H with numerous groups assisting with packing, donations, and delivery.

A W. VA. TRAIN RIDE DAY #3

The schedule for today was another planned ride on a train titled, "The Durbin Rocket." But it was listed as a 2pm. departure. Therefore after breakfast at the resort, free time was a new experience. Wow! One half day without a bus departure deadline!

So, I decided to walk to the golf course club house for exercise and the possibility of some practice on the golf driving range. Although I could see the club house in the distance from our sleeping quarters there was no direct walking pathway. A resort employee confirmed this discovery too.

After consulting a hiking map of the area, I started walking compliantly, as directed by the trail map, towards the resort entrance.

I quickly surmised that this pathway was in the complete opposite direction of my goal.

But I continued onward disregarding my mental compass. Suddenly a sign appeared indicating the club house road. Making a right turn, I prodded ahead in that direction. By this time my mind was finally fully awake and contemplating the circumstances!

Something luckily clicked in my skull that this winding roadway was descending downhill and the return, walking trip would be a more demanding, uphill battle. Also the destination was still obscured by many surrounding trees which left me with no distance calculation. So, instantly I changed my mind after an eighth of a mile jaunt and returned to the comfort of my room. So much for strenuous exercise!

The bus left for Durbin, W.Va. at noon for the Durbin Rocket steam engine train ride. As we traveled along Highways #33 and #28, it was remarkable to see very tall, straight-trunked trees reaching skyward, searching for sunlight. They seemed to individually be stretching for survival with their neighboring competitors.

Their trunks were nearly straight vertically like soldiers in dress uniforms awaiting an inspection.

These trunks seemed to maintain the same diameters, foot after foot, as they sprouted upwards along both sides of the road. Even with mountains on one side and deep valleys on the other, these trees which seemingly stood at attention like soldiers, produced a comfortable and safe traveling environment.

More abandoned buildings were evident. We wondered whether descendants had left these rural areas for city life. Once I saw a deserted basketball goal post standing in a pasture field near the road with weeds growing around its base. I let my mind wander to the point that maybe basketball great, Jerry West, who was from this state, may have practiced his skills at that goal. The highway continued weaving, plummeting, and ascending until we reached Durbin in northern Pocahontas County in the Monongahela National Forest.

The Durbin Rocket utilized the Durbin and Greenbrier Valley Scenic Railroad. The steam engine was fueled by coal so soot was prominent in the motor coach when the wind direction was especially spiteful. One look at our clothing confirmed the black tint was in evidence but this occurrence was forecast and expected. We had dressed appropriately.

The train ride was listed as a two hour, 10.5 mile, round trip. The engine pushed the train cars for the first half of the trip, so the old, wood seats faced backward. Early engineering however, allowed the seat backs to roll over to provide front viewing on the return trip. The conductor had to demonstrate this maneuver however. This negated my resolution that I would have to watch the world go by backwards during the last half of the trip. The train traveled 5-6 miles per hour and followed the Greenbrier River. Many early train tracks followed rivers because of the gradual inclines for easier engine function.

Our next bus stop was at Green Bank, W.Va., a remote area to learn about and see the Green Bank Telescope (GBT), a 100 meter-diameter radio wave telescope. This sophisticated instrument has detected Quasars and "Black Holes" in the universe. The GBT is locally referred to as the "Great Big Thing." Digital electronics are prohibited within ten miles of the facility. Cell phone towers are not allowed. Airplanes are too high to produce interference. Personal medical devices can be filtered. However, the telescope has picked up interference from electric toothbrushes and flying squirrels. Conifer trees absorb radio waves and have been planted nearby on purpose.

Dinner that night was at Asbury's Restaurant in the Seneca Caverns area. Then back to the resort for another night of rest.

chamber and watches TV, naps, or listens to music while the oxygen saturates their blood plasma, allowing it to carry 15 to 20 times the normal amount of oxygen to the tissues. The oxygen spurs the formation of blood vessels at the wound site, and encourages white blood cell activity to fight infection.

Due to the pressurization and depressurization process, the experience is typically compared to deep-sea diving, and a treatment session is referred to as a "dive." (At the beginning of each treatment, patients may feel pressure in their ears, as if descending under water or gaining altitude in a plane.) The center's team members – all of whom bring with them experience in surgery, nursing or other areas of healthcare – have received specialty training accredited by the Undersea and Hyperbaric Medicine Society. The care team will include physicians, a nurse practitioner, and nursing staff members under the supervision of a clinical program director.

Along with HBO therapy, the center will offer other clinically proven treatment options in partnership with Healogics, the nation's largest provider of advanced wound care services. These treatments include negative-pressure wound therapy, bioengineered tissues, biosynthetic dressings and growth-factor therapies, as well as debridement.

Patients who have diabetic ulcers, pressure ulcers, burns, osteomyelitis, lymphedema, malignant wounds, vasculitis, peristomal skin irritations, and similar conditions can benefit from the center's treatments.

The entrance to the Parkview Huntington Center for Wound Healing is located next to the medical office building on the campus of Parkview Huntington Hospital. The 3,657-square-foot space inside the center encompasses the HBO suite, five treatment rooms, a changing area with lockers and restrooms, and offices. It will be dedicated as the Huntington County Medical Society Wound Care Center in recognition of a gift from that organization.

Free parking is available. Physicians and patients will soon be able to make appointments for December 18 and later dates.
