Kudos, Kicks & Karats

DO YOU REALLY LISTEN TO WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY?

from the American Counseling Association
 Most of us like to hear ourselves talk. We enjoy sharing information about ourselves, our jobs, and our recent activities. And there's nothing wrong with that, unless we spend so much time talking that we forget to actually listen to what others are sharing.

Being a good listener is an essential skill in maintaining strong personal relationships, whether with relatives or with our friends. Yet, too often we tend to believe that solid relationships just seem to happen. Having good friends takes some work and effort on our part, and a major element in building those relationships is learning how to listen.

Most of us have probably had the experience of having a friend clearly demonstrate he or she really wasn't listening when we had shared something important with them. Their words or actions indicate that what we had to share simply wasn't heard or understood.

Sadly, many of us do the same thing without realizing that we've put listening to what a friend is communicating on automatic, mainly hearing the words but not registering the meaning. That can be a real problem when what is being shared is truly important to the person talking to you.

So how do you become a better listener? A good starting point is to pay attention to how others listen when you have something significant to share. Try to note what a good listener, someone you appreciate, says or does to indicate that they're paying attention to you and what you're saying.

Next, do the same type of observing with someone who doesn't really seem to hear you when you share something important. How do they show they're not really paying attention? Are they distracted? Evaluate if your own actions favor those of the good or poor listener.

If your listening needs improvement, it isn't difficult to become a good listener. Start by simply listening more than you speak when someone is communicating something important. Don't interrupt with your own stories and ideas, even if you think your experience is similar.

Instead, take time to seek clarification if things were said you didn't understand, and show you're paying attention by feeding back key parts of the conversation. At the end, try to summarize what was shared to demonstrate you heard and understood the key points.

Being a good listener is an important skill and an essential element in building and maintaining strong friendships.

Drivers can expect lane restrictions and traffic directed by flaggers while INDOT maintenance crews maintain access for vehicles. Motorists are urged to seek an alternate route. If driving through the chip seal work zone, drivers should take extra caution, drive slowly and allow additional space between vehicles to prevent stone chips from damaging windshields or paint.

Once the chip seal has cured, crews will sweep the highway clear of loose stone, apply a fog seal surface coat and paint pavement markings. The entire process can take up to two weeks in each area. All chip seal in Huntington, Whitley, Kosciusko and Fulton counties is expected to be complete by early September, weather permitting.

A NOLA TRIP (NEW ORLEANS, LA)

Day # 4 by Larry Ryan On Tuesday morning, the tour bus took us to the Garden District of homes, known as the American section of New Orleans. It naturally obtained this name, as you can guess, since it is located opposite the French Quarter across Canal Street and is more Americanized. Notable homes in this area included the Anne Rice house, author of "The Witching Hour, etc.," Nicolas Cage, John Goodman, Sandra Bullock, and the football players, Archie, Peyton, and Eli Manning. It is also the film site for "Benjamin Button." Brad Pitt and Angelina tried to buy that film-site home. It was unavailable then, but since has been sold.

Lunch was served at the popular, Palace Café in that same district. The afternoon was open for a visit to a WWII museum or to hone one's cooking skills at the NOLA School of Cooking. I rejected past history and decided to invest my time in the after-cooking experiences. So we optioned to spend our free time in the French Quarter, people-watching, relaxing near the river, and later hoping to acquire some southern tan sitting poolside at the hotel. Then the "Kick-Back."

More extraneous information: Many original houses in New Orleans were called "Shotgun Houses."

This nomenclature was attributed because of the alignment of rooms from the front door to the back door gave a clear view completely through the house. It was stated that a shot through the front door could hit a target in the back yard!!

These were long, narrow homes. Now you figure out what a "Double Shotgun House" is.

The Dixie theme song, "I Wish I Were in the Land of Cotton" was instigated by southern military troops who were stationed in cold New York state during the winter many years ago. Cotton is not grown in Louisiana.

The name of the professional football team, "New Orleans Saints" was approved by the city's Catholic leaders in a reply that said the city needs all the saints it can get! The black and white uniform colors were chosen because the first owner was an oil man and the city was known for its sugar production.

WEB PROGRAM

The National Center for Missing & Exploited Children has launched, "Into the Cloud," a brand new online safety product for children in grades K-5. This includes an animated web series and video game. Using data from actual NCMEC CyberTipline reports, each episode focuses on a different element of online safety, from strategies for handling cyberbullying to recognizing and reporting unsafe/inappropriate interactions and content.

Additional episodes will be available throughout the year.

"Into the Cloud" presents important safety information in an age-appropriate and entertaining manner! All the resources are free!

The first two episodes are available now at www.missingkids.org/netsmartz/videos.

WAYS TO MAKE THE WORLD A BETTER PLACE FOR SENIORS

(Family Features) By 2050, the senior population (adults age 65 and older) will be more than double that of the world's youngest citizens, and the number of people living beyond age 80 is expected to triple over the next 30 years.

As the aging population increases, some 11.3 million seniors are living alone, according to the Institute on Aging. In addition, women are twice as likely as older men to live by themselves.

Without proper support, seniors may face a wide range of issues including limited mobility, chronic conditions, improper nutrition and feelings of loneliness. For example, older adults can have problems chewing or may take medications which interfere with their appetites. However, research shows lack of companionship may be the biggest challenge.

In fact, an AARP survey found 1 in 5 adults over the age of 40 were "socially disconnected," which can impact health. People who reportedly experienced loneliness and isolation had lower mental well-being scores, and those who were dissatisfied with their level of social engagement were more likely to report a decline in cognitive function, as well.

While anyone can benefit from a kind gesture, seniors are some of the most in-need members in many communities. There is likely a wide range of opportunities to enhance the lives of seniors in your area. Numerous programs and agencies exist to help you determine the best way to make a difference.

One example is Ready to Care, an initiative from Home Instead Senior Care that challenges people to complete weekly care missions. Each activity guides members through various ways to give to senior-related causes, learn about the aging crisis and issues impacting seniors, and serve seniors through small actions of kindness.

Most care missions are simple acts, such as opening a door, learning about Alzheimer's or helping with a chore. Each week, a new mission is delivered to participants' phones via text message.

Small gestures, like these simple acts of kindness, can go a long way toward improving a senior's day.

Physical assistance: Most seniors are eager to retain their independence, but everyday tasks can pose fall risks or require exposure to harsh weather conditions that can be dangerous to older adults.

* Offer to bring in the daily newspaper or mail.

* Mow their lawn or offer to help with other yardwork.

* Lend a hand in caring for pets, such as taking a dog for a walk or helping clean up waste from the yard.

* Offer moral support and a sense of physical safety by volunteering to join them on a walk.

Social support: Loneliness is common among seniors, especially those who live alone. Show seniors in your area they have a meaningful place in the community and options for companionship.

* Offer a friendly wave and say hello when you see them out.

* Invite them to dinner, either at your home or at a restaurant.

* Have your children or kids you know in the area draw pictures or write letters.

* Make a date for an afternoon or evening of entertainment, such as cards, a movie or board games.

Practical solutions: For various reasons, some seniors may be unable to complete everyday tasks. Offer a helping hand in their daily routines when possible.

* Lend your time to take them to run errands.

* Deliver baked goods or a home-cooked meal to improve access to nourishing foods.

* Help arrange for professional assistance and services, such as an audit to ensure homes are safe.

To find more ways you can care for the seniors in your community, visit imreadytocare.com.

How You Can Help

Consider these simple ways you can help the aging population by taking action and learning about issues impacting seniors:

* Lend your voice. Be an advocate for change in public actions and medical research for the aging society. If you're an expert by experience, share your knowledge about senior-related issues and public policy measures.

* Give from your heart. Less than 1% of charitable donations go to organizations that help seniors. Find senior-focused non-profits to give your next charitable donations to, such as one dedicated to raising awareness, inspiring change and accelerating progress in Alzheimer's care and research.

* Get prepared to care. Educate yourself on issues that impact seniors and complete small acts of kindness for seniors in your life. Sign up for weekly care missions and find additional information to better equip yourself to care for seniors at imreadytocare.com.

* Give your time. Volunteer with local non-profit organizations that help seniors or offer support related to senior-affiliated issues.

START THE SCHOOL YEAR

OFF RIGHT

(Family Features) As kids head back to school, it's important to provide them with the necessary resources to succeed. As a parent, you can take steps to put your kids on the path toward a successful school year.

To help your children put the best foot forward, consider these suggestions from The Salvation Army, which operates hundreds of low-cost after-school programs for kids of all ages in low-income neighborhoods across the country and understands the importance of setting children up for success all year.

Get back into a routine. During the summer months, family routines tend to slide, especially morning rituals and bedtime habits. A few weeks before school starts, begin transitioning your way back to a normal school schedule. A gentle progression toward earlier bed and wake-up times is easier on kids physically and mentally. Try adjusting by 15 minutes each day until you reach the optimal schedule for your family. Remember that routines aren't just about the clock, though. If there are certain steps that are part of the school year routine, such as packing lunches and laying out clothes for the next day before bed, make those part of your transition plan, too.

Set a good example. Kids learn important behavioral lessons by watching the adults in their lives. The back-to-school season provides many opportunities to demonstrate compassion and social responsibility. For example, giving back to an organization like The Salvation Army helps provide funding for programs that support the educational needs of children who otherwise may not have access to the same resources.

Research resources for homework help. Discovering your child is struggling in school can be overwhelming.

You'll want to be able to pull in help as quickly as possible, so it's a good idea to research resources in your area that can help provide support outside the classroom. Your school likely has some options available, but it's a good idea to also look into tutoring programs and other community services that encourage literacy and study skills as well as provide one-on-one assistance with homework and school assignments.

Get organized. The first few weeks of school typically bring plenty of change and adjustment. You can help manage the stress by creating some structure. Use a wall calendar to keep track of school start and dismissal times, bus pick-up and drop-off times, after school activities and other appointments. Review lunch menus and plan ahead so you're not finding out at bedtime that you need to pack a home lunch in the morning. Stock up on breakfast foods and make time to catch up on laundry before school begins so hunger and wayward socks don't derail your mornings.

Explore extra-curricular programs. With the new school year comes numerous ways to enrich your kids' social and cognitive development. Extra-curricular activities let kids continue practicing skills even after the school bell rings, but in a fun environment so they may not even realize they're still learning and cultivating healthy, safe relationships with friends. In addition to sports and clubs, a wide array of music and art education activities may be available that focus on everything from choir, band and dancing to drawing, writing and acting.

Set goals. Begin the school year by encouraging your children to take ownership and pride in their learning. Talk about goals like reading a certain number of books each month or earning grades that reflect their highest potential. Get kids motivated by designing goal boards or charts that can serve as daily reminders and track their progress. For larger goals, consider setting milestones so they can celebrate progress along the way and stay motivated for a big finish.

and maximizes pound-for-pound power efficiency, compared to its 25 cubic centimeter gas-powered engines.

The technology also features a unique Power-Lok system. This standalone drive unit offers lightweight, high-performance string trimmer, blower and hedge trimmer attachments. It saves storage space and money with one tool that does the job of three different units.

Printed circuit board technology and magnetic rotors generate concentrated, efficient power and torque that is on par with gas-powered units so the toughest outdoor challenges can be tackled without the fill-ups, fumes or pull-starts of gas engines.

By delivering high-torque performance with no dependence on battery voltage, CORE technology leverages a revolutionary motor design and a responsive load-sensing controller to deliver power and performance where and when it is needed. It also features zero gasoline emissions and much less noise than gas-powered equipment.

Because the motor consists of lighter weight materials and does not require a gas tank, it is lighter for users to operate.

With longer runtimes than other gasless tools, the technology offers all the power needed for various outdoor projects with nearly 45 minutes of power on one charge. The typical recharge time is 1 hour.

MEDICAL ERROR

7 questions that could save your life

(Family Features) While you may routinely hear about medical errors, it's less common to hear about a misdiagnosis.

Inaccurate or delayed medical diagnosis is a medical error many people rarely talk about. Yet research released by the Society to Improve Diagnosis in Medicine (SIDM) shows it remains the most common, costly and catastrophic of all medical errors.

Researchers at Johns Hopkins Medicine and CRICO Strategies found that 34% of malpractice cases resulting in death or permanent disability stem from an inaccurate or delayed diagnosis, making it the No. 1 cause of serious harm among medical errors.

This happens, in large part, because making and communicating a medical diagnosis is a complex and imperfect science. There are more than 10,000 known diseases and more than 5,000 laboratory tests, but only a limited number of symptoms to provide the clues necessary to make an accurate diagnosis.

However, there is a new sense of momentum in the healthcare community to raise awareness and reduce inaccurate and delayed diagnoses, including more funding from the federal government.

Even as researchers and experts continue to explore how best to address this costly, dangerous and sometimes deadly issue, it is important for patients to be aware of it. Everyone has a role to play in improving the diagnostic process, including physicians, nurses, radiologists, laboratory scientists, health system leaders and, perhaps most especially, patients.

It's critically important that patients share information with their medical providers and know the right questions to ask in order to decrease the likelihood of misdiagnosis.

To help patients have conversations with their physicians about their diagnoses, SIDM's patient toolkit offers a questions checklist, including these seven questions to ask:

1. What is my diagnosis? What else could it be?
2. Why do you think this is my diagnosis? From test results? From my physical exam?
3. Can you give me written information about my diagnosis? A pamphlet? A website?
4. Can you explain the test or treatment you want me to have?
5. What are the risks to the test or treatment you want me to have? What happens if I do nothing?
6. When do I need to follow up with you?
7. What should I do if my symptoms worsen or change, or if I don't respond to treatment?

In addition to these questions, always ask when test results will be ready. Get a copy for your records and call your doctor's office if you do not receive your test results.

For more information and steps you can take to avoid misdiagnosis, download the Patient's Toolkit for Diagnosis and share your personal story of inaccurate or delayed diagnosis at ImproveDiagnosis.org.

HONOR HISTORY AND ITS LESSONS

(Family Features) The reasons for understanding the past are plentiful. Historical knowledge may illuminate the moments that shaped a loved one's life or simply satisfy a curiosity about events and people that occupied a different place in time. A look into yesteryear can help make sense of the world today or even foreshadow happenings well into the future.

Whatever the basis for your interest in looking back in time, there are many ways you can honor and develop a deeper understanding of history. It's just a matter of finding the method that fits your interests best.

Visit a museum or historical monument. These locations are rife with information, and often artifacts, that bring the past to life. You can find museums for all types of topics and interests, some with broad information about an event or subject and others that tell a story from a particular vantage point. Monuments offer a similar glimpse at the past, but they generally serve as physical markers of a particular place or event. This means you can stand exactly where the nation's forefathers stood as they fought for liberation from British soldiers or take in the same sights as the pioneers who ventured west along a wagon trail.

Explore written accounts of history. Historical books lend a diverse perspective on history, from factual accounts of times and places to personal narratives that let you experience exceptional moments through the eyes of someone who was there. For example, "Sacred Duty: A Soldier's Tour at Arlington National Cemetery" from publisher Harper Collins paints an inspiring portrait of Arlington National Cemetery's elite Old Guard unit, as well as telling the story of U.S. Senator Tom Cotton's time as a platoon leader there. America's oldest active-duty regiment, dating back to 1784, The Old Guard conducts daily military honor funerals on the 624 rolling acres of Arlington. Readers have the opportunity to immerse themselves in the honor and the challenges of duty at the nation's most sacred shrine. Learn more or order online at HarperCollins.com.

Let elders tell their tales. Though much of recent history is heavily documented, there's no comparison to hearing firsthand how a person felt and thought as those historical moments unfolded. War stories, memories of childhood, tales from the first time driving a car - these are all experiences that looked very different a generation or two ago. Use special occasions and family gatherings to encourage the elders in your life to tell their stories and make notes or record those memories to cherish years into the future.

Research your family tree. No history is as personally relevant as your family tree. Your ancestors hold the answers to exactly why you look like you do, and maybe even why you act certain ways. Online services make it easy to begin piecing together relations that date back generations.

Visit a cemetery. You may think of a trip to a cemetery as purely a chance to pay your respects to the departed. While visiting grave sites of loved ones you've lost and leaving flowers or other trinkets are common practices, you can also learn a great deal from a cemetery. Looking for surnames you recognize may alert you to members of your family tree you never knew or seeing dates etched in the stones may help you piece together bits of family history.

Digging into the past may be entertaining, insightful, inspiring or all of the above. You may be surprised by all you can uncover once you get started.
