SCAM ALERT

Cryptocurrency is always in the news these days. It's an emerging sector, and when something promises great wealth and opportunity, the bad guys come out in force.

Better Business Bureau's Scam Tracker features cryptocurrency losses on an almost daily basis. Many smart and knowledgeable people are falling prey to scammers who are making thousands, if not millions, of dollars from unsuspecting victims.

If you are thinking about investing in the stock of companies that tout high returns associated with cryptocurrency — use caution. Do your research, and only invest money you can afford to lose.

One area where Scam Tracker seems to be showing plenty of cryptocurrency cons is on social media. Often someone, pretending to be a friend, will reach out to you through a message app, and tell you about a great opportunity with a cryptocurrency. That person has often stolen your friend's social media account. You believe you are talking to a good friend and follow their advice. Soon you are making all sorts of money on a site, but when you go to take your money out, your "friend" and the people you were doing business with disappear.

A victim who lost $1,000 submitted to BBB Scam Tracker just that sort of story: "This person contacted me through my friend's Instagram account, this impersonator made it known to me that he/she got paid through this platform. I believed because I was under the impression I was talking with my actual friend, little did I know the account was hacked. Long story short, I fell for the scam and reporting this in hopes that it never happens to someone else, I hope this reaches all before it's too late."

Promises of great wealth go by the boards. Another victim who lost $3,700 wrote on Scam Tracker, "They refuse to give you your money back or let you withdraw the money first and pay the fees. Every option requires you sending them thousands of dollars with the risk of never getting anything back."

Follow These Tips to Avoid Crypto Investment Scams

If you are contemplating a crypto-related stock investment, here are six tips

CONTROL YOUR LEGACY

When you hear “estate planning,” what do you think of? For many people, these words evoke images of immense wealth. But estate planning isn't just for the wealthy – it's for everyone. And it's about more than preserving wealth – it's about putting you in control of your own legacy. But how can you achieve this worthy goal?

You can start by identifying your estate planning objectives. Here are some of the most common ones:

- Controlling movement of assets to beneficiaries – During and after your lifetime, you will want to ensure your loved ones receive what you want them to have, and when. Through documents such as a will and a living trust, and techniques involving life insurance and using proper beneficiary designations, you – not the courts – will control the movement of your assets to the desired recipients.

- Naming someone to make decisions for you if you become incapacitated – Naturally, you hope to stay in good physical and mental shape throughout your life and remain capable of making your own financial and health care decisions. But the future is not ours to see, so, to protect your interests and those of your loved ones, you may want to consider creating arrangements such as a power of attorney, health care directive and a living will. In this way, you'll still be able to control the key choices that may lie ahead.

- Providing for minor children or dependents – If you have young children or other dependents, you'll want to be sure they'll be looked after if you aren't around. In your estate plans, you can name a guardian for them. You can also use various estate planning tools, such as life insurance, beneficiary designations and the establishment of a trust to provide the necessary financial resources for your loved ones.

- Supporting charitable organizations – Leaving something behind for your family is obviously an enormous part of your legacy – but it may also be important to you to provide support for charitable groups whose work you've admired. Of course, you can contribute to these organizations while you're alive, but through strategies such as donor-advised funds and charitable remainder trusts, you can include these groups in your estate plans.

- Managing taxes efficiently – If you're likely to have a large estate, your heirs may need to be concerned with income and estate taxes. To help control these taxes, you can take a number of steps, such as making outright gifts to your family during your lifetime, establishing an irrevocable life insurance trust, creating a family limited partnership and making charitable donations.

All the estate-planning strategies and techniques mentioned here can be complex – so, to implement them, you'll need to work with an estate planning attorney and a tax professional. You may also want to include your financial advisor, who can help ensure your estate planning objectives align with your important financial goals, such as living comfortably in retirement and providing for your children's or grandchildren's education.

By identifying your objectives and working with your professional team, you can create an effective estate plan – and help yourself maintain control of your legacy.

to help you steer clear of scams:

- Do not say "yes" to cryptocurrency stock purchases from an aggressive cold caller, even if the claims sound plausible, particularly if the recommended stocks are very low-priced. Don't feel guilty about hanging up. Not answering at all, or putting down the phone, are generally the best and safest responses to a cold caller or anyone aggressively pitching low-priced stocks or other investment opportunities.

- Be suspicious of anyone who makes guarantees that an investment will perform a certain way. Also, be wary of pushy sales pitches that encourage you to "act now."

- Research opportunities before investing. Use FINRA BrokerCheck® to check registration status of, and for additional information about, the people and firms who tout these opportunities.

- Find out whether a company files with the Securities and Exchange Commission. Check the SEC's EDGAR database. Read the reports and verify any information you have heard about the company. But remember, the fact that a company has registered its securities or files reports with the SEC doesn't mean that the company will be a good investment in general—or the right investment for you.

- Be wary of stocks with huge spikes in price. This could signal potential manipulation or fraud.

- Know where the stock trades, and pay attention to any cautions associated with the stock. Most stock pump-and-dump schemes tend to be quoted on an over-the-counter (OTC) quotation platform like the OTC Markets, which provides icons to warn investors of concerns associated with a given company. These include a stop sign to indicate the company cannot or will not provide important information to regulators, exchanges or the OTC Markets—and also a skull and crossbones to warn that the security, company or a person who controls the company might be involved in a spam campaign, questionable marketing, regulatory action or more.

ANOTHER OF MY WIFE'S UNUSUAL DREAMS

Another Jan of Dogwood Glen Story

by Larry Ryan

The dream started with the notification and funeral arrangements for the death of an acquaintance, Jim Hudson. The following people, Denny Stroud, Julia Smith (maiden name), Becky Grover, and Chris Patton, were contacted and available to travel for this funeral calling. None of the others knew each other. My wife, of course, knew all of them.

Denny offered to drive and transported the group. Chris was already at the funeral home.

The destination was a neighboring town. After arriving in that town, it was discovered that none of the passengers knew the address or location of the funeral home. While driving around, the Highway #18 intersection was crossed repeatedly. So, the dream must be centered in Marion or Hartford City. After offering several suggestions on where to turn, someone announced that they were going around in circles. Unbelievably, no one had a cell phone with them.

Finally they stopped at a business store and my wife went in to ask for information. The instructions only made her confused, so she sent Denny in for directions.

While waiting outside, my wife and Julia discovered a large mound of snow. Their childhood minds returned as they ran to the cold, white accumulation and started to play. Soon, Denny emerged from the store with directions and the group finally arrived at the funeral home.

After signing the guest book, the group was led by the funeral director into the viewing room. To their surprise and utter fright, Jim was upright, in a sitting position, inside a corner of the casket. The situation became even more eerie as Jim's eyes followed their every movement in the room. The group of callers left quickly.

Somehow in their frightened state of mind, they made it back home. However, there is no word on the whereabouts of Chris Patton!

FLOODPLAIN TOOL

A new Indiana Floodplain Information Portal (INFIP) is available that will save users valuable time.

INFIP is designed to show flood risk associated with Indiana bodies of water and provide information specifically for local and state floodplain permitting. The information is based on the regulatory floodplain limits, because floods exceeding the regulatory floodplain can and do occur.

With this new tool, the user can download a Floodplain Analysis and Regulatory Assessment (FARA) directly from the app. The tool reduces FARA wait times from 30-60 days to a matter of minutes. The user also has an option to file for staff review of their site but should only do so if:

- the nearest stream's drainage area is greater than one square mile and there is no mapped floodway;
- there is not a mapped floodplain on the nearest stream to the point of interest;
- there is no mapped floodway for the stream nearest the point of interest; or,
- the point of interest is in a floodplain of another stream, but the stream nearest the point of interest does not have a mapped floodplain with a floodway of its own.

The new site is at infip.dnr.IN.gov.

EAGLE WATCHES

Afternoon eagle watches will be offered Feb. 5, 12, and 19 at Salamonie Lake through DNR's Upper Wabash Interpretive Services (UWIS).

Participants must call and speak to UWIS staff to register and choose a date and afternoon time when they will meet at the Salamonie Lake Nature Center.

A call-in platform will be used for the audio guided caravan.

- Upon arrival, participants may visit restrooms in the Nature Center, then return to their vehicles.

- Participants, if possible, should have a cellphone to access the call-in platform.

- Be mindful of Indiana state law concerning driving and hand-held cellular devices.

- If available, bring binoculars, cameras, and spotting scopes. Shared visual aids will also be available on site.

- Be sure to have plenty of fuel in your gas tank. All caravan trips will include a stop to view a nesting site, a stop to view a feeding area, and will end near dark at a bald eagle roosting area near Mississinewa Lake.

There will be some walking on flat surfaces. Those who need accessible parking should request it during registration.

Participants will be able to warm up with hot food and drink items available for a freewill donation at the roost site through the Friends of Upper Wabash Interpretive Services.

For safety, Frances Slocum Road between State Road 124 and County Road 550 E in Miami County will be closed for this event.

For more information and to register, call 260-468-2127.

Upper Wabash Interpretive Services is at 3691 S. New Holland Road, Andrews, 46702.

SPEEDWAY IS BACK

Following an abbreviated 2021 season, Montpelier Motor Speedway officials have announced that the 3/8-mile clay oval will return to a full-season schedule in 2022.

Saturday, April 9 has been targeted as the opening night.

The historic oval was sitting idle for the first half of 2021 but came to life in late July under the direction of Larry Boos, who will return this season in the same capacity as promoter/manager of the north eastern Indiana speed plant.

"We had spent much of our time last year getting to know the racers and fans that support Montpelier and have learned quite a bit. They are a supportive group, and our mission is to give them a quality program in 2022," stated Boos.

Under that premise, Montpelier Motor Speedway will feature UMP Modifieds, Super Stocks, Street Stocks, and Hornets as weekly divisions. Multiple dates have been selected for appearances from the Midwest Thunder Midget Series and the Dirt Truck Series. Additionally, the Late Models will have a few dates on the calendar.

Negotiations are underway for additional dates, to be announced soon.

"We appreciate the interest that fans have in touring groups coming to Montpelier, but we know our place in the racing world and what we are capable of doing. We are grassroots weekly racing and as we continue to grow and learn we will continue to expand our initiatives. When we bring in outside sanctioning groups, we want to be able to do it right," concluded Boos.

HEALTHCARE SCHOLARSHIP

Parkview Foundations is now accepting applications for the Parkview Huntington Spirit of Service Scholarship. This opportunity for funding is made possible by the generosity of donors and their desire to support students wishing to further their education.

Applications are now available and will be accepted – along with all required documents – through Feb. 25.

Parkview Huntington Spirit of Service Scholarship

The Parkview Huntington Spirit of Service Scholarship will provide a $1,500 scholarship (payable directly to the school) to be used exclusively for tuition assistance.

Huntington County students pursuing post-secondary education in a healthcare-related field of study at any accredited institution of higher learning or technical training – as well as students residing outside Huntington County who are enrolled at Huntington University – are eligible to apply. GENEALOGY REPORT

CHANNEY

Lloyd F. Chaney, 88, of Hartford City, passed away Sunday evening, Jan. 9, 2022, at the IU Health Ball Memorial Hospital in Muncie.

A native and life resident of Blackford County, he was born Oct. 1, 1933, to Virgil Chaney and Mary M. David Chaney and was a 1952 graduate of Hartford City High School. He married Phyllis A. Cox on June 6, 1954, in Delaware County. They celebrated more than 62 years of marriage prior to her passing Oct. 16, 2016.

Known for his ownership of "Chaney's Corner" in Blackford County, Lloyd continued after his father in the automotive service at the same location for fuel and many automotive needs. Lloyd had also worked at Anaconda Wire in Marion, Ind., and had retired from General Motors.

His family, and the time he spent with family, was most dear to him. Many fond memories were made "at the lakes" where Lloyd enjoyed water skiing. Water skiing was his passion and was even known to ski barefoot. A notable quotation of Lloyd's, known to provoke his wife on Sunday mornings, when they were at the lakes was "Sunday mornings are for water skiing" ... which also riled local fishermen. Additional interests Lloyd had include bowling, car racing and trains.

He leaves behind four children: Janette (Keith) Milholland, Mary A. "Annie" Battiste, Michelle (Stan) Roush and Michael (Kim) Chaney; a former son-in-law, Charles (Richael) Atkinson; and 14 grandchildren and several great-grandchildren. He also has a brother-in-law that survives, Les (Cheree) Cox.

In addition to his wife and parents, he also is preceded in death by a son, Lloyd Francis Chaney Jr., and a daughter, Janelle Atkinson.

Services will be held at 1 pm

Friday, Jan. 14, at the Waters Funeral Home, 501 W. Washington St. in Hartford City, with Pastor Kevin Lex presiding. Burial will follow in the Hartford City Cemetery.

Visitation will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday at the funeral home prior to services.
