WHF MEMBER SPOTLIGHT

Daniel G. Sommer (84) & Helen Sommer (86 yrs old)

This happy couple joined Warren Health and Fitness July 2015. Dan has continued to achieve his fitness goals in his time here at WHF. Dan states that the best part of WHF is, "The management of the gym. I have been involved in gyms in Ohio and Indiana for over 20 years. WHF is the best managed gym I have been a part of in those 20 years." Helen has also achieved a lot in her time here. She is happy to have the indoor carpeted walking track. She has achieved walking a mile to start each of her sessions. Helen has macular degeneration and cannot see well so she has been working on balance and leg strength alternating several machines. Helen states that the best part of WHF is, "the way the businesses and churches of the community support the gym. I like the brightness, cleanness, and all of the positive signs that are put around." In Helen's additional comments she states that, "It is good to hear of the activities for youth. They are learning to make their bodies healthy."

Warren Health and Fitness is beyond proud of this couple! If they can do it so can you! There is no excuses! Keep up the great work Helen and Dan! We are lucky to have you at Warren Health and Fitness!

Salamonie Active Men's Annual Easter Egg Hunt will be on Saturday March 26th at 10:00 AM Sharp at the Knight-Bergman Center.

FESTIVAL REPORT

The Salamonie Summer Festival meeting was held March 14 and was attended by a few people with ideas for 2016. If you or your organization are making plans for the 2016 festival, please contact Cheryl DeWeese or any officer with what you are planning and what times and when it might happen. We need to have get the flyer together with information. This can be a great weekend if we all work together.

There is a lot of new events planned and some old ones being brought back. We need to have the days busy and happening downtown. We still need someone willing to head up the fun wagon. The wagon work is all done before the festival weekend. Thanks in advance for all your support.

THE UPTOWN GARDENER
by Ruth Herring

Wow! What a ride, that's all I can say. My mom and I took off the last week of February to see her brother in Texas. We flew down, which was a first time for flying for me. It was quite the experience. I wasn't really nervous but other things kinda weighed on my mind. I am not fond of heights so that was a big one but I am also claustrophobic and was very leery when they shut the door and pressurized the cabin. But I survived it all and lived to tell about it. Speed is not something that bothers me, in fact it was pretty awesome when that plane started down the runway, just put me right back in my seat. Now when we started floatin in the air, I could feel my stomach kinda floppin around but I closed my eyes and said "Lord don't make me lose it now". Things calmed down a lot once we got up in elevation. My mom very quietly asked me "are you all right?" "Yep mom I got this..I hope" was my response.

We had a 2 hour direct flight, so for the first time I was good. We rolled in to Dallas Love Feld at around 3:30 p.m. and my main objective was getting out of Dallas before rush hour. So we got our rental car and buzzed out of Dodge. I took the back streets out of the airport and didn't have a bit of problem. It was so nice, lots of really pretty homes on that street, I was trying to drive and sight see at the same time. They had daffodil's in full bloom at the end of February.

So our journey to my uncle's house was another 2 hour drive, and we pulled in just in time for supper. By then I was ready to try to walk a mile, I can only sit for so long and my time was up about 30 miles back up the road.

We pulled off a big surprise for my aunt and uncle on Friday. Their son flew in from Wyoming for the weekend, and my other cousins that lived in the Texas-Oklahoma area all drove down to visit for the weekend too. We have such a good time when we are together. There is never a dull moment. Always so much to talk about and never enough time. So in the near future I might be able to tell of some of our crazy discussions we have or in my case some of the stupid ideas we come up with like "riding the bull". Yep, just a tad sore!!

I received a recipe from my aunt while we were down there that sounds really good. She said it is really good and I trust her opinion. So here it is and until next time, "see ya all"

BLOOD DRIVE

The American Red Cross encourages the community to give blood during National Volunteer Month this April and make a difference in the lives of patients in need.

More than 3 million generous people donated blood through the Red Cross last year. The Red Cross salutes these volunteer blood donors who helped fulfill its lifesaving mission and invites others to roll up a sleeve and join them.

Kathy Huey became a donor after encouragement from her husband, who has given more than 11 gallons of blood. "I love the fact that I'm helping others by giving a little bit of my time," she said. "It's simple and easy and helps save lives – what could be better?"

Volunteer donors are the only source of blood products for those in need of transfusions. Donors of all blood types are needed this spring.

Extra reason to give in April: Those who come to give blood with the Red Cross this April can enter to win four tickets to a Cedar Fair amusement park of their choice and have access to purchase additional park passes at a discount, including to Cedar Point, Kings Island, and other Cedar Fair parks.

To make an appointment to give blood, download the free Red Cross Blood Donor App, visit redcrossblood.org or call 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767).

MORE PAGE 3

Indiana Department of Homeland Security (IDHS) is asking Hoosiers to take the time during Flood Safety Awareness Week, March 13-19, to plan ahead for potential flooding.

There are several steps individuals and families can take to prepare for flooding. IDHS encourages all Hoosiers develop a family emergency communications plan and put together a disaster preparedness kit. The kit should contain essential items a family needs to sustain itself for at least three days. When developing a family communications plan, make sure to include an out-of-state contact and meeting places in case the family becomes separated.

In the neighborhood

In many cases, easy preventative yard work can help minimize the effects of flooding in neighborhoods.

High amounts of debris, especially near storm sewer drains, can impede the flow of water and contribute to potential flooding in residential areas. Using a rake or shovel can help clear storm drains while avoiding contact with flood water. Dispose of debris in compost piles or through local municipalities.

When water levels are low, clear any debris from waterways, ditches or culverts that may obstruct water flow and force water over the banks and into neighborhoods and streets.

Contact local emergency management officials if any large obstructions are seen in rivers or creeks. Be patient, as it may take time for the issue to be addressed. If the issue is on private property, removal may fall to the property owner. The best time to inspect waterways and storm drains is before a rain storm, when water levels are lower and currents move more slowly. Without taking preventive measures, clogged or blocked drainage systems can lead to numerous problems.

If living near bodies of water (ponds, rivers, streams, etc.), it is important to be prepared.

Ensure that all sump pumps are operational, and clear any gutters or drain spouts of debris.

Have an escape plan established, including multiple routes so flooded roads can be avoided.

Keep any important documents, such as birth certificates and Social Security cards, in a safe, waterproof file to help prevent damage.

Monitor local weather and river forecasts and keep an eye on any waterways along roads near residences.

Water levels can change rapidly and flooding can begin with little or no warning.

Consider evacuating in advance of flooding if rising water may cut off access routes to and from home.

On the road

According to the National Weather Service, most flood-related deaths happen while driving. Hoosiers should also keep the following in mind when encountering flooded roadways.

Never attempt to cross a flooded road, even if it seems shallow. Water can conceal dips, or worse, flood waters can damage roadways, washing away the entire road surface and a significant amount of ground.

Remember, just a few inches of moving water is enough to carry away most vehicles, including SUVs and pick-up trucks.

Be especially cautious at night when it is harder to recognize high water danger.

Flood Insurance

Floods can be very expensive, and purchasing flood insurance is one of the most cost-effective steps homeowners can take to protect their homes. FEMA's FloodSmart website (www.floodsmart.gov) includes a tool to quickly estimate the cost of damages from various amounts of flood water in a home, as well as resources that can make a residence more flood resistant. Also conduct a home inventory of all valuables. An easy way to do this is with a home video camera or photographs. Thorough documentation of belongings can help when filing a flood insurance claim.

"We're number 1!" Words typically associated with a victory celebration carry a more dubious distinction in Indiana.

According to the KIDS COUNT in Indiana Data Book, in 2014 Indiana logged the highest number of methamphetamine incidents in the nation. Meth incidents occur when police find an active meth lab, dumpsite, or seize equipment or ingredients used to make meth. Caught in the middle are more than 350 children who were removed from their homes because of these conditions. In Muncie recently, a 16-year-old girl reportedly suffered third degree burns from a meth mishap in her home.

"Quite often, we're uprooting those young people with just the clothes on their back because when we find meth labs, we find the associated toxic environment that goes with the making of meth," said Sgt. Tony Slocum of the Indiana State Police.

A recent survey found 13.4 percent of Hoosier children have lived with someone who had a drug or alcohol problem, worse than the national rate of 10.7 percent. According to the National Center for Biotechnology Information, a parent with a substance use disorder is three times more likely to physically or sexually abuse their child.

That reality is playing out across Indiana. Department of Child Services (DCS) spokesman James Wide says there's been a "70 percent increase in the number of our cases that have drug involvement."

In rural Scott County, police, public health and community leaders are battling a prescription drug and heroin abuse problem. The KIDS COUNT Data Book shows that from 2011 to 2014, Scott County's child abuse and neglect rate doubled, the number of child neglect cases rose 116 percent, and child physical abuse cases increased 142 percent.

Michelle Korty of Prevent Child Abuse Scott County says "90-95 percent or higher" of abuse and neglect cases in Scott County are tied to drugs. Korty says some parents are so fixated on chasing their next high that "very little of their time, energy, and resources is left to focus on providing the safe, nurturing environment and for meeting the basic needs of their children."

The American Academy of Experts in Traumatic Stress reports children exposed to parents who abuse drugs can suffer long-term physical and psychological damage. They blame themselves for their parents' problems. They feel rejection and resentment when left alone for long periods of time, and are more likely to experience anxiety, depression, low self-esteem and struggle to form adult relationships.

"We have got to change the conversation," said Republican State Senator Jim Merritt of Indianapolis, who has introduced several new pieces of legislation related to the enforcement of drug laws and treatment for drug addiction. "We've always thought of it as a character issue. I always say drug addiction is a disease not a character flaw."

John Wernert, a licensed psychiatrist and secretary of Indiana's Family and Social Services Administration, agrees and says the state is doing more to help addicts manage their disease. "We understand these are chronically relapsing diseases and it may take someone 8, 10, 12 times to go through detoxification before they actually make a commitment to sobriety and staying clean."

In the meantime, some of Indiana's children will continue to suffer. State law says that all Hoosiers are mandatory reporters—meaning if you suspect a child is being abused or neglected, you are required to file a report. You can do so by calling the state's toll-free child abuse hotline number, 1-800-800-5556.

Taking that step may be one way to ensure that the health, safety, and future of some of our state's most vulnerable children will become priority number one.
