In Wake of Recent Tragedy, Consumers Warned Against Old, New Scams

INDIANAPOLIS, IN - The recent attacks in New York City and Washington D.C. have prompted the resurgence of phony door-todoor solicitors and scam artists throughout Indiana warns Attornev General Steve Carter.

"Unfortunately, some people are trying to profit from the tragedy last week by phoning and going door-to-door to solicit funds for disaster relief. These solicitors are not legitimate and the monies given to these individuals are not being sent to aid the rescue efforts on the east coast.

"I urge all Hoosiers to take extra care when asked to donate money. Always check out the group or individual asking for help. There are many legitimate organizations such as the Red Cross who are providing assistance and resources to our fellow Americans in New York and Washington, D.C., but these valid groups are not soliciting on the phone or in person," Carter cautioned.

Further information on contact numbers for the Red Cross is available on the home page of the Attorney General's website at www.in.gov/attornevgeneral under the news release on fundraising scams.

In addition to these newer consumer frauds, older scams such as the Nigerian money transfer requests have resurfaced in Indiana.

As a reminder, the Nigerian scam involves consumers and businesses receiving a letter or e-mail from individuals claiming they are Nigerian or other foreign officials who have been overtaken by a revolution or other national emergency. They want assistance in transferring large sums of money out of the country and investing the funds in the U.S. A reward is offered for helping to transfer the funds.

These solicitations are not legitimate and I encourage Hoosiers to protect themselves and their finances by ignoring these types of requests," Carter said.

Bogus solicitations over the Internet and e-mail are also cropping up. Known as "spamming" these e-mail mass marketers use a variety of methods to solicit money. "Express Relief Fund 2001" is just one example of unscrupulous fundraising efforts that misdirect donations.

"Sadly, imposter websites and e-mail campaigns are common following disasters, making it all that much more important for Hoosiers to take precautions before making relief donations, particularly online," Carter said

RIBBONS FOR PATRIOTISM

PJ's Flower & Gift Shop is donating bows for Freedom. These bows and ribbons are all sizes, for your vehicle, home or business, and bows or ribbons to wear. These bows are free with a donation to the American Red Cross. All money received will go to the American Red Cross.

The American Red Cross is continuing to rush disaster relief and blood into the Northeast and other areas around the country following Tuesday's catastrophic terrorist attacks in New York City, Washington D.C. and Pennsylva-

"Immediately, the American Red Cross responded to these attacks, providing relief and taking steps to ensure an adequate supply of blood," said Steve Anderson, "The Red Cross will continue to be there with comfort and care for the victims, their families, emergency workers and others affected by these tragedies during the weeks, months and even years that the recovery process will take."

The Red Cross is providing relief in all the affected areas and at airports around the country, including crisis counseling, shelter, blankets, food and beverages and much more for the thousands who are affected. Under the Federal Response Plan, the American Red Cross is designated to provide mass care for those in need. In the wake of these traumatic events lies a wide path of catastrophic psychological destruction in which countless victims will require assistance, Hundreds of Red Cross Disaster mental health workers are already at the scene of the disasters and will continue to be there, helping those affected with the emotional trauma.

On Tuesday, thousands of generous Americans across the country took time to give blood to save a life. Within the first six hours of these disasters, 700,000 people called to schedule an appointment at a Red Cross blood center. The Red Cross is asking that Americans continue to help people in need by calling 1-800 GIVE LIFE to schedule a blood donation anpointment, as blood needs will continue into the months ahead.

The American Red Cross activated its Aviation Incident Response (AIR) Team to respond at crash sites in New York City, D.C. and Pennsylvania, along with Boston, San Francisco and other points of origin or destination for the downed airplanes. The AIR Team is made up of leadership teams from Red Cross disaster relief functions including Disaster Mental Health Services and Mass Care, and is activated by the National Transportation Safety Board through the Aviation Disaster Family Assistance Act of 1996. Red Cross chapters around the country are also offering assistance to travelers stranded at airports throughout the country.

The Huntington County Chapter of the American Red Cross requests that individuals wishing to give blood call 1-800-GIVE LIFE to schedule an appointment for the best time and place to give blood. Calling this number will help the Red Cross better prepare for the increased numbers of blood donors.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR:

THE AMERICAN FLAG

In the wake of the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon I feel compelled to write this letter. During World War II my father fought in the South Pacific and my father-in-law was wounded in France. A brother-in-law saw duty in Vietnam and my son was one of the first soldiers from the Army's 1st Cavalry to arrive in Saudi Arabia during the Gulf War.

My husband, Tom, retired from the Army in 1995 after serving for 25 1/2 years and currently is the Huntington County Veterans' Service Officer. He helps veterans and their families and also gives speeches at schools about the meaning of our national flag.

Because of this, I always thought I knew what our flag was all about and how important it is. It always broke my heart when I attended local basketball games or other athletic events and watched, as the Star Spangled Banner was played, as kids and adults alike failed to even put their hand over their heart. During the National Anthem before one basketball game a female student was dancing and laughing and making a lot of racket, much to the embarrassment of her fellow students who tried to get her to stop. The girl just kept it up. I can't help but wonder where did she learn to act like that?

Perhaps, after the last few days, that dancing girl and the other students and adults who couldn't be bothered to even put their hands over their hearts, understand a little better what our flag is all about and why its important to honor it. I beg adults to teach their children what the flag really stands for and to respect it. That the red stripes symbolize the blood which has been shed by hundreds of thousands of American soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen since the Revolutionary War and the white stripes stand for the bandages to wrap those wounds. That they should stand when the flag goes by, that they should place their hand over their heart during the National Anthem to show respect to the men and women who have died to protect the things our flag stands for and to allow it to fly free over our country.

This past Tuesday people died just because they were Americans. Just because they were living and working in America. Now it's also their blood which is symbolized by the red stripes on our flag. Reports indicate that 'many of' the passengers on Flight 93 which crashed in Pennsylvania may have consciously made the decision to sacrifice their lives to save thousands of others. What else but patriotism accounts for that type of sacrifice? How proud the parents and children and brothers and sisters must be of those passengers. Is there any doubt that the relatives of those passengers stand proud when they see the flag?

Lately, although I'm pleased that the sale of flags has skyrocketed and that people all over America have started displaying flags from their homes and from buildings and offices, I am even prouder that I can walk out on my own front porch and see the stars and stripes waving proudly in the same place they were waving before the terrorists struck and where they have waved for the past 31 years Proud to be an American, Louise Applegate

DEAR EDITOR:

Once again Indiana's gasoline retailers have been unfairly subjected to charges of "price gouging" in the hours and days which followed the horrible events of Tuesday morning September 11th. Our organization does not condone and will not defend those few retailers who saw fit to charge as much as $3 to 5 dollars per gallon. Several of these have admitted their mistake and are taking steps to rectify things with their customers.

At the same time we want the public to understand that retailers who may have raised their prices as much as 30-40 cents per gallon had justifiable reasons for doing so. Bear in mind that petroleum supplies already were thinner than normal here in the Midwest (due to a major refinery fire). Contrary to what you may have read or heard, some

SOUDER STATEMENT

U.S. Rep Mark Souder (R-IN) released the following statement following the tragic events of September 11:

"Like all Americans, I watched the tragic events of yesterday with a combined sense of horror, frustration, and sorrow and sympathy. The scale of human tragedy is almost unimaginable, and my prayers go out to all of those who lost family and loved ones.

"Our first duty as a nation is to do everything in our power to help those who have been injured or who have lost loved ones in this tragedy. I urge everyone in northeast Indiana to try to learn how you can help, either by donating blood or by any other method.

"We also need to find out who was responsible for this beingus act, so that we can hold both them. and anyone who may have abetted them responsible. This is in many ways like an act of war, but it is a new kind of war. Unlike Pearl Harbor, we do not know yet for certain who our enemy is. And if, as suspected, the enemy turns out to be Osama bin Laden and terrorists associated with him, we must of course respond, but we will have to consider the best method of response for this new kind of enemy.

"Right now, it appears that radical elements from the Middle East may very well be responsible for this attack on our country. We must remember that there are many citizens who practice Islam in northeast Indiana who are good and loyal Americans and who are as horrified and angered by these terrible acts as anyone else. Indeed, many of these Muslims have come to the United States to escape exactly this kind of violence.

"It is important for Hoosiers to understand that the government is taking extraordinary measures to make them as safe as possible, whether on an airplane or anywhere else. If we stop flying, stop traveling, close our businesses and become a nation huddled in fear, we will put our already precarious economy on a path straight for recession. And even worse, we will have let them win. Hoosiers have never backed down from a challenge, and in this time of perhaps the greatest challenge in decades, I urge all of us to be strong, to pull together, and to make a statement to the world that we will not be bowed."

LETTERS TO STUDENTS

Superintendent of Public Instruction Suellen Reed has forwarded two letters of caring concern to Indiana schoolchildren from another one-time educator, First Lady Laura Bush.

The letters carry a message of reassurance during the current time of national crisis to tell children that their families, their teachers, and their school guidance counselors are ready to I listen to student feelings of sorrow, fear, or confusion. Mrs. Bush trained and worked as a school librarian, and has an interest in early childhood development.

The two letters, one directed to elementary school students and the other to middle and high school students, appear on White House stationery on the Department of Education site on the World Wide Web at this URL address: < http://www.doe.state.in.us > .

Here is the text of the two letters from First Lady Laura Bush: From the White House

To Middle and High School Students

September 12, 2001 Dear Students:

On September 11, 2001, many Americans lost mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers and friends in a national tragedy. Those who knew them are feeling a great loss, and you may be feeling sorrow, fear and confusion as well.

The feelings and thoughts that surround this tragedy are as plentiful as they are conflicting. I want to reassure you that there are many people — including your family, your teachers, and your school counselors — who are there to listen to you.

September 11 changed our world. But with each story of sorrow and pain comes one of hope and courage. As we move forward, all of us have an opportunity to become better people and to learn valuable lessons about heroism, love and compassion.

As we mourn those who died let

As we mourn those who died, let us remember that as Americans, we can be proud and confident that we live in a country that symbolizes freedom and opportunity to millions throughout the world.

Our nation is strong, and our people resilient. We have a well-earned reputation for pulling together in the worst of times to help each other.

I send my best wishes and my hope that you will always take care of your family, friends, neighbors and those in need. Sincerely, Laura Bush

From the White House To Elementary School Students September 12, 2001

Dear Children:

Many Americans were injured or lost their lives in the recent national tragedy. All their friends and loved ones are feeling very sad, and you may be feeling sad, frightened, or confused, too.

I want to reassure you that many people — including your family, your teachers, and your school counselor — love and care about you and are looking out for your safety. You can talk with them and ask them questions.

You can also write down your thoughts or draw a picture that shows how you are feeling and share that with the adults in your life.

When sad or frightening things happen, all of us have an opportunity to become better people by thinking about others. We can show them we care about them by saying so and by doing nice things for them. Helping others will make you feel better, too.

I want you to know how much I care about all of you. Be kind to each other, take care of each other, and show your love for each other.

With best wishes, Laura Bush

major oil suppliers did raise their wholesale price Tuesday afternoon. Others were allocating (rationing) fuel to their retailers. Several of the petroleum supply terminals closed Tuesday while those that remained open had restricted access and long lines of tanker trucks waiting to be filled. For all these reasons and more, gasoline retailers had just cause to expect significantly increased costs to replace the fuel in their tanks, and delays in receiving their next load of fuel were likely. Retailers who raised their prices a modest amount were doing what they normally do for the usual reasons. They were not "price gouging.

If fingers are to be pointed, the general public and the news media should take a good look at themselves. Consumers listened to unsubstantiated rumors, fed by inaccurate or incomplete media reports, and engaged in a panic buying spree which severely taxed the fuel distribution system. Many retailers had to bring in additional employees to handle the increased business, control the traffic and, in some cases, break up customers fistfights. This panic buying helped drive up business costs and in many cases caused the retailers to run out of fuel. Motorists buying gasoline in droves when they don't really need it, simply creates an artificial demand. Unexpected demand puts upward pressure on prices.

The long-term consequences of the terrorist attack on fuel prices are unknown at this time. As the next few weeks and months unfold there may be other fuel "scares." Our best advice is don't listen to rumors, stay calm and continue your normal fuel buying behavior. If you encounter a roque retailer who is truly price gouging, the best thing to do is keep driving and you'll find another retailer who is selling fuel at a fair price. I am proud to say that the vast majority of Indiana's retail gasoline marketers responded to Tuesday's panic buying with price modera-

TALKING WITH CHILDREN

This release was just sent by Purdue University. It was written by Judy Myers-Walls following the Columbine High School tragedy. However the information is applies when talking to children about any major incident.

Talking with Children

When the Talking Gets Tough

Wars, shootings in schools, natural disasters, deaths at sporting events - as adults we hope that these and other tragic outcomes will never happen anywhere and definitely will not impact the children and youth we care about. We would like to protect those young minds from the pain and horror of difficult situations. We would like to ensure that they have happy, innocent, and carefree lives.

So what is a parent, teacher, or other caring adult to do when disasters fill the airwaves and the consciousness of society?

Don't assume that the kids don't know about it. They probably know more than you think. The reality of today's world is that news travels far and wide. Adults and children learn about disasters and tragedies shortly after they occur, and live video footage with closeups and interviews are part of the report. Children and youth are exposed to the events as soon as they can watch TV or interact with others who are consumers of the news. Not talking about it does not protect children. In fact, you may communicate that the subject is taboo and that you are unavailable if you remain silent.

Be available and "askable." Let kids know that it is okay to talk about the unpleasant events. Listen to what they think and feel. By listening, you can find out if they have misunderstandings, and you can learn more about the support that they need. You do not need to explain more than they are ready to hear, but be willing to answer their questions

Share your feelings. Tell young people if you feel afraid, angry, or frustrated. It can help them to know that others also are upset by the events. They might feel that only children are struggling. If you tell them about your feelings, you also can tell them about how you deal with the feelings. Be careful not to overwhelm them or expect them to find answers for you Help children use creative outlets like art and music to express their feelings.

Children may not be comfortable or skilled with words, especially in relation to difficult situations. Using art, puppets, music, or books might help children open up about their reactions. They may want to draw pictures and then destroy them, or they could want to display them or send them to someone else. Be flexible and listen.

Reassure young people and help them feel safe. When tradic events occur, children may be afraid that the same will happen to them. Some young children may even think that it already did happen to them. It is important to let them know that they are not at risk - if they are not. Try to be realistic as you reassure them, however. You can try to support them and protect them, but you can not keep all bad things from happening to children. You can always tell them that you love them, though, You can say that, no matter what happens, your love will be with them. That is realistic, and often that is all the children need to feel bet-

Support children's concern for people they do not know. Children often are afraid not only for themselves, but also for people they do not even know. They learn that many people are getting hurt or are experiencing pain in some way. They worry about those people and their well being. In some cases they might feel less secure or cared for themselves if they see that others are hurting. It is heartwarming and satisfying to observe this level of caring in children. Explore ways to help others and ease the pain.

Look for feelings beyond fear. After reassuring kids, don't stop there. Studies have shown that children also may feel sad or angry. Let them express that full range of emotions. Support the development of caring and empathy. Be careful not to encourage the kind of response given by one child: "I don't care if there's a war, as long as it doesn't affect me and my family."

Help children and youth find a course of action. One important way to reduce stress is to take action. This is true for both adults and children. The action may be very simple or more complex. Children may want to write a letter to someone about their feelings, get involved in an organization committed to preventing events like the one they are dealing with, or send money to help victims or interventionists. Let the young people help to identify the action choices. They may have wonderful ideas.

Take action and get involved in something. It is not enough to let children take action by themselves. Children who know that their parents, teachers, or other significant caregivers are working to make a difference feel hope. They feel safer and more positive about the future. So do something. It will make you feel more hopeful, too. And hope is one of the most valuable gifts we can give children and ourselves.
