VOICES FOR RECOVERY

People with a mental and/or substance use disorder can live a healthy and rewarding life. The 2016 Recovery Month theme, "Join the Voices for Recovery: Our Families, Our Stories, Our Recovery!" highlights the importance of families, communities, and individuals sharing stories of recovery to encourage others to make a personal connection with the recovery movement.

The prevalence of mental and/or substance use disorders is high. In 2014, about 21.5 million Americans ages 12 and older (8.1%) were classified with a substance use disorder in the past year. Of those, 2.6 million had problems with both alcohol and drugs, 4.5 million had problems with drugs but not alcohol, and 14.4 million had problems with alcohol only.

Approximately 7.9 million Americans have both a mental and substance use disorder.

For many people, recovery:

- Emerges from hope, which is fostered by friends, families, mentors, providers, colleagues, and others who have experienced recovery themselves;
- Occurs via many pathways, which may include professional clinical treatment, use of medications, support from families and in schools, services through homeless programs, faith-based approaches, peer support, and other approaches;
- Is holistic—meaning that recovery encompasses a person's whole life, including mind, body, spirit, and community;
- Is supported by relationships with peers and allies, and on social networks;
- Is supported by addressing trauma, including physical or sexual abuse, neglect, domestic violence, war, disaster, or profound loss;
- Includes positive youth development theories and concepts;
- Involves individual, family, and community strengths and responsibilities; and
- Is fostered by respect.

These principles of recovery can help people establish a blueprint for their own journey. However, it's important for people living with these conditions to become aware that they are not alone in their efforts. The right support system can help ensure that those in need are addressing the four key aspects of recovery:

- Health: The person learns to overcome or manage his or her condition(s) or symptom(s)— and make informed, healthy choices that support physical and emotional well-being;
- Home: Having a stable and safe place to live;
- Purpose: A person in recovery participates in meaningful daily activities, such as a job, school, volunteer opportunities, family caretaking, or creative endeavors, and has the independence, income, and resources to participate in society; and

GOLF HAPPENING

by Larry Ryan
While attending the BMW Golf Tournament at Crooked Stick Golf Course in Carmel, IN on September 11, 2016, I witnessed something so out-of-the-ordinary that I actually did a triple-take. Not the typical double-take, but so eye-catching that it required extra viewing! A real head-jerker!

But first, my son, who Christmas-gifted me with a one-day ticket to the event so he could drive my red, BMW sports car to the golf course, and I had just left our prized seats in the grandstand adjacent to the eighth green. These were difficult seats to leave because previously we had been on our feet meandering the slightly damp spectator pathways from the practice range, to holes #1, #2 and #3 for about two hours. So the hour and half being seated, resting the feet and legs was a welcomed relief. This was not only helpful for me but for my much-younger son. He admitted it too! Not to mention the spontaneous, but brief shuteye that captivated me. I believe that this episode was not observed by my offspring. Thank goodness. Otherwise this might have been my last golf pass from him. Maybe he was napping too.

During this restful period, we watched several professional golfers try their fortune of landing their white golf ball on the manicured #8 green rather than in the adjacent pond that nested closely on one side and half of the front. Most did. A very few didn't. Remember that they receive their wages by being accurate.

And these approach shots were struck from a distance so far away that I couldn't determine the identification of the golfer swinging the club the program booklet listed the twosome's names. To compound the feeling of mystery in identity, the golf balls blended into the party cloudy sky and most of the small, flying objects were unseen by me until they dropped onto the smooth, velvet-like green carpet, in the water, the rough, or a sand trap.

We retained our coveted bench seats until my favorite professional golfer, Phil Mickelson reached the 8th green. This finally occurred when he struck a spectacular approach shot from a down slope lie near the water that was about 190 yards away from the flag stick. Since Phil is a very popular player and is present in video endorsements, he received warm applause from the crowd as he strode onto the green. Prior to watching him complete his putting, my son and I said goodbye to our seats, headed down the stairs, and made our way to the ropes lining the pathway between the 8th green and the 9th tee box. This was preplanned so we could be near the golfers, especially Mr. Mickelson, as they headed towards their next challenge.

My son was several feet down the rope line from me with his cell phone in hopes of snapping a photo of Mickelson.

I HAD SOMETHING ELSE IN MIND! A humorous idea involving this golfer had been in my thoughts ever since I had attended the same tournament a few years earlier. I had stifled my vocal cords then, but gained more courage as time passed. I decided that today would be the moment that the idea would be verbalized! Also my son was far enough away so not to hear and become the judge of my preplanned comments. I was close to the rope as the golfer approached my vantage spot. He marched forward with his eyes straight ahead. I steadied myself and was ready with my words! I said, 'Phil, did you take your Enbrel today?' This was in reference to his colorful, often repeated commercial about this medication for relief from arthritis. No one else nearby heard me, but he did! His head turned towards me, he smiled and proceeded onward.

I had accomplished my long overdue plan of action. I was proud of my courage to do such a thing. Maybe it was my age or the possibility of never having that opportunity again that accelerated my desire to make it happen on Sunday. Mission accomplished!

Now back to the main observation story. After the golfers, caddies, and officials passed our location, a rope gate was opened for spectators to cross the pathway. We progressed through that opening and walked parallel to fairway #9 towards the clubhouse. Just as we climbed a gradual incline and past a few trees, I caught a glimpse of a large object to my left side, moving in the opposite direction.

Utilizing my second and third glances, I observed what I thought was a body strapped to a moderately fast-moving hospital gurney! Now golf and gurney have nothing in common except for the first letter in the spelling of each word. I questioned my sanity instantly! Did I really see what I thought I saw? Why would an indoor, medical vehicle be present outside and especially on a very crowded golf course? To add to my bewilderment was my questioning as to whether the person on the gurney was actually alive. The individual's facial appearance was pale but seemed female even though the forehead was partially obscured with a strap secure across it. Also present was a breathing tube apparatus covering the nose and mouth. The person was inactive and fastened to the gurney in a supine, feet-first position. I assumed that the person was alive. Otherwise the hospital would not have released the individual.

A young, male adult was pulling the gurney across the mud-embedded grass as rain the previous day had reshaped the terrain. Questions arose in my mind. Why the rush in that direction instead of the exit if this were a possible medical emergency. Was this a college fraternity initiation stunt? Did someone lose a wager? It certainly puzzled me!

Actually I was just guessing that the person, alive or dead, on the moving platform was female. Limited view! Brief encounter! However, I have been looking at women for a long time and consider myself somewhat of an expert on that subject. I'm sticking to my verdict!

With just a fleeting view and a latent desire to be a comedian, I made a poor joke, to my son, that a person will do just about anything to get attention or to bypass the crowded turnstile! My son frowned at my attempt for humor. But I couldn't help myself. It was such an unusual and unexpected experience that it struck me as quite amusing. We wannabe comedians stretch for humorous ideas.

However, after telling this story to my wife, she and my son corroborated and figured that the gurney I described was actually a contemporary, handicapped wheelchair. Ok! I'm sorry that a joke ensued.

But questions arise. Why would a handicapped person, that immobilized, bet at this event? Was the caretaker fulfilling a previous obligation? Was this activity written in a last will and testament? Why was there such a rush in the movement of the modified wheel chair? What was their destination? How would a person in a supine position be able to view golfing activity?

I had no answers for these questions. No more jokes either!

HARVEST SAFETY

With harvest season officially underway, motorists should expect to see more slow-moving farm equipment from Indiana's 57,700 farming operations on Hoosier roadways. Lt. Governor Eric Holcomb and the Indiana State Department of Agriculture (ISDA), Indiana Department of Homeland Security (IDHS), Indiana State Police (ISP), Indiana Department of Transportation (INDOT), as well as the Bureau of Motor Vehicles (BMV), are teaming up for the Be Alert, Slow Down, Share the Road campaign to bring attention to the need for more safety on Indiana's rural roads.

"Now that harvest season is underway, Hoosiers can expect to see an increase in slow-moving farm equipment on Indiana roadways," Lt. Governor Holcomb said. "This harvest season we are asking all motorists to be alert, slow down and share the road with our Hoosier farmers, especially in rural areas. Our goal is to reach every Hoosier with this important safety message in an effort to protect farmers and drivers across the state."

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, farm equipment vehicles (excluding trucks) were involved in 93 fatal crashes across the U.S. In an effort to be proactive, Indiana's state agencies have once again partnered together to raise awareness about the importance of rural roadway safety. This announcement also comes during National Farm Safety and Health Week, which is a national effort designed to promote safe and healthy practices on farms and ranches across the country.

"As the tenth largest farming state in the nation, harvest season is a busy time of the year for Indiana," said Ted McKinney, ISDA Director. "With farmers bringing in this year's crop, we want to encourage all Hoosiers to be mindful and alert for farm equipment on the roads. By allowing a little extra time for travel, motorists can reach their destinations and farmers can get their work done without incident or injury."

The following tips are part of the Be Alert, Slow Down, Share the Road campaign and will help ensure the safety of motorists, passengers and operators of slow-moving equipment:

* Farmers on roadways are going to or from work, just like many other people on the road. Share the road.

* Most farmers will pull over when they are able to let you pass, but it may take time for them to get to a safe place to do so. Be patient.

* Farm equipment is wide, sometimes taking up most of the roadway. Be careful and slow down when passing.

* The red triangle on the back of an implement, farm machinery or other vehicle indicates a slow-moving vehicle (under 25 mph).

* Do not try to pass a slow-moving vehicle on the left without ensuring that the vehicle is not planning a left turn. It may appear that the driver is pulling over for you to pass when it is actually preparing to turn. You will drive right into its path, endangering yourself and the farmer.

* Do not pass if you are in a designated "No Passing Zone" or within 100 feet of any intersection, railroad grade crossing, bridge, elevation structure, or tunnel.

"Five seconds is the time it takes to close a gap the length of a football field between a car driving 55 mph and a tractor going 15 mph," said John Erickson, IDHS Director of Public Affairs. "Distracted driving is one of the leading causes of vehicular injuries, and with more slow-moving vehicles on Indiana's roadways, it's important for Hoosiers to take their time, exercise caution and avoid distractions – such as using a cell phone while driving."

By state law, farm equipment must have the nationally designated slow-moving vehicle sign – a red triangle-shaped reflector – to warn oncoming drivers that their equipment is on the road. These vehicles often travel at speeds no higher than 25 mph.

Indiana State Police Superintendent Doug Carter said, "This is the time of year that all drivers, be they of automobiles or farm equipment, must be attentive and share the road." Supt. Carter continued, "Whether you're a farmer or a regular commuter, the goal is for everyone to go home at the end of the day to enjoy dinner with their family that was made possible by the farmer you just shared the road with."

As a new effort this year to further educate motorists, BMV has provided driving schools across the state with educational resources on the topic of rural roadway safety. Instructors will now be able to use these materials, developed by ISDA, to create lesson plans and incorporate into the classroom – not just during harvest season, but throughout the year as well.

"Just as surely as the leaves will turn, farm equipment will be sharing our rural roadways during the coming weeks of harvest season," said Kent Abernathy, BMV Commissioner. "I urge all drivers to be extra careful and watch your speed to keep both farmers and motorists safe."

A U.S. Census Bureau survey claimed that an estimated 19 percent of the U.S. population lived in rural areas in 2014. Despite this information, over half of all traffic fatalities nationwide occurred in rural areas.

"Farm equipment can be larger, heavier and slower than it appears from a distance," said INDOT Commissioner Brandye Hendrickson. "Drivers should allow extra room and reduce their speed immediately when seeing farm equipment ahead. Be cautious in rural areas where farm equipment may not be seen easily, such as hills, curves and intersection corners not yet harvested."

Community: Relationships and social networks should provide support, friendship, love, and hope.

Those in recovery have this to say:

- "I'm a nicer person, more patient, less judgmental, more thoughtful, approachable and relaxed."
- "I appreciate life more now. I embrace life, I'm a better person to be around."
- "People in AA meetings loved me back to life."
- "I can look myself in the mirror again. Even when times get tough, my worst day sober is much better than my best day drunk."
- "I don't have everything I want. Who does? But I have contentment and everything I need."
- "Today I feel alive."

Behavioral health is essential to overall health, prevention works, treatment is effective, and people can and do recover.
