Christmas time, in Warren, in the early 1900s, was a time for families to get together. At first, Christmas trees were small and stood on a table. The father carefully picked out the best tree, chopped it down and took it home. Setting up a tree was called "planting it" and decorating it was called "dressing it."

Christmas trees were decorated with candies, cookies, fruit and nuts, paper cut-outs, popcorn strings and candles. Lighting the candles was an adult's job and a bucket of water was always kept close by. Candles were probably lit only once or twice. Candles dripping wax on the floor led to the invention of the tree skirt.

On Christmas day, the father would hand out the gifts. Many of the gifts were handmade. A hobby horse was a popular gift for a boy or a girl. One likely gift was a homemade sled or animals carved out by the father.

The parlor was where the family and guest would get together to celebrate. After the gifts were opened, the rest of the day was for games and activities for the whole family. Mothers spent a lot of time in the kitchen so there was a lot of good food to eat. Calling on the neighbors and caroling was done during the Christmas season.

I have not written an article for a while because I have been busy putting together my third book of short stories. These have been printed and are now on sale for $20.00. If you would like one please call my home at 375-3711 or if you are at Heritage Pointe you can purchase one from Lilly Nutter. Some of the stories are about The Sanitary Market, The Refresher Bottling Company, C. Carey Cloud and The Granger Electric Company. This would make a nice gift for the life long resident who has everything. I would like to thank everyone who has told me they miss my articles in the paper. I hope to continue writing about "My Town and Yours" after the first of the year. Have a very Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Call Today (375-3531) or email (wwkIy@citznet.com) to order your Christmas Greeting to be published in the December 24th issue of the Warren Weekly. Wish Friends, Family & Customers Happy Holidays.

World of Science

Children ages 7 to 11 are invited to Salamonie Reservoir for a fun and exciting three days of camp, Dec. 28-30. Each day provides a variety of fun from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Come experiment with the 'mad' interpreters and staff at the Salamonie Interpretive Center to explore crazy colors, silly senses and epic explosions. Bring warm play clothes, an extra pair of shoes or boots and a science-savvy attitude.

The camp's activities are guided by interpretive naturalists trained to provide a safe and fun environment in which children can learn about the world.

REAL TREES

The season is off to an excellent start. Many customers visit Indiana Christmas tree farms each year because of the pleasant memories and family traditions.

Young couples, singles and families have purchased a real Indiana fresh Christmas trees thisyear. They know that a real tree is the best choice for our environment. Customers and grower s know that real Christmas trees, grown as a renewable crop, are products of nature, produce oxygen, and store carbon as they grow. There is still time to visit an Indiana real Christmas tree farm.

Keeping your real Christmas tree fresh

Caring for your Indiana Fresh Christmas tree is easy.

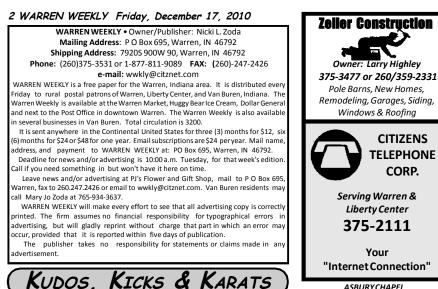

The most important thing to remember is that real trees need water.

 \cdot Cut off ½ " or more from the base of the trunk before putting up the tree

 Place the tree in your tree stand and fill it with fresh water

What is Christmas? And Some Things To Do To MAKE IT EVEN BETTER

by V Neil Wyrick As to Santa, he really was real - a Christian leader in Myra (modern day Turkey) in 4 AD. Tradition tells us that St. Nicholas was a shy, good man who wanted to help the poor, but anonymously. To make sure no one knew where the gifts or money came from, he sometimes had to be very inventive. One time, or so goes the story; wanting to give a poor family money for the wedding of their third daughter, he found he could not throw the purse in through an open window, as he had done with the other two daughters. So he climbed up on roof and dropped the purse down the chimney. Fortunately, it landed in one of the stockings that had been hung to dry over the warm hot coals. And thus the Christmas stocking. And how did we get to know him as Santa Claus? It came about as a mispronunciation of the Dutch SinterKlaas which was their way of saying St. Nicholas.

Keeping alive the International flavor of this article may I remind that in Hungary, children clean their shoes and then put them outside next to the door or window. For them it is the equivalent of hanging a stocking. If they have really been bad, they may find a golden birch placed next to the candies. This symbol for a spanking probably got the message across. Were you ever threatened with the promise of a piece of coal in your stocking if you didn't behave? Well, yes, another strange custom from places far away.

Worship ...

Wednesday .

In Finland, many families visit cemeteries to place candles on the grave stones of family members.

In Belgium, a special sweet bread called 'cougnou" is served for Christmas breakfast. It has been made in a shape meant to represent the baby Jesus.

Hopefully your Christmas is more of holy and not of humbug. And the answer to which is true depends on what you emphasize. So here are some thoughts on how to make this Christmas even better than last year. Well, if not necessarily better, at least to some degree different.

How about having a cookie exchange with a neighbor? That way you each get to sample each others favorites.

Or if you live where it snows, don't just look out the window at it, go for a walk in it. And if there is a park nearby, even better.

And why not have a game night as Christmas approaches. Checkers or monopoly if you still have an old board lying around. Or better still make up a game or two on your own. A kind of family project. It may not be the greatest ever played, but they will be all yours.

There are many kinds of gifts that can be given at Christmas. Obviously, the nicest one is a nicer you, so work at being a better person than you already are. Work on your smile power. Pack away some patience for use when things get hectic.

This idea isn't for everyone, but think about it. Is there a widow or widower down the street with their family a thousand and more

Real Christmas trees live on

The most common ways to recycle Christmas trees are biodegradable mulch, fish and wildlife habitat, and erosion control. Recycled Christmas trees provide cover for birds and animals. Real Christmas trees are used for shoreline control and aquatic habitat. After the holidays trees are chipped and made into biodegradable mulch for landscaping. Check for recycling opportunities in your own community.

After producing family memories, the trees can continue to provide many environmental benefits.

BEEF MEETING SET

Beef producers can learn techniques in feeding forage and hay crops at an upcoming meeting. The 2011 Area XI beef meeting, hosted by the Indiana Beef Cattle Association (IBCA) and Purdue University Extension, will take place on January 5th. It will be held at 6:30 p.m. in Columbia City, IN at the Eagle's Nest on 125 S. Glen Trail.

The meeting will feature great food and valuable information on beefissues. IBCA will provide an update on policy and programs, and Purdue Extension personnel will share a presentation entitled "Cowherd Feed Cost Considerations"

If you would like to attend the 2011 area beef meeting, please RSVP by calling the Huntington County Extension Office by January 3. Note that the counties in Area XI include Adams, Allen, DeKalb, Huntington, LaGrange, Noble, Steuben, Wells and Whitley.

The topic of the Extension presentation was chosen based on this year's rainfall across the state, Purdue University Extension beef specialist, Ron Lemenager said.

"Some parts of the state received average to abundant amounts of rain this year that made their forage mature faster, which has left them with a large supply of, yet lowquality, forage. Other parts of the state received little rain, which limited their supply of forage."

The meetings will provide information on what producers should do in each of these situations in managing lowquality forage, and which supplements to include when forage is limited, Lemenager said.

Area farmers certainly experienced extremes in 2010 with the heavy rains in the spring and the very dry weather throughout late summer and fall. Some producers estimated a 30% pasture loss this fall as a result of the lack of rainfall. This means that more hay in storage is likely being fed to livestock.

A state-wide webinar has also been planned by Lemenager and Keith Johnson, a Purdue Extension forage specialist to be held on December 16. They will provide information for beef producers regarding wintering their cow herds and preparing for the next growing season. The plan is to archive the program for anytime viewing after the program airs on the Purdue Beef Team Web site: www.thebeefcenter.com.

Cattle producers can find additional information and keep up with the latest beef news on the Purdue Animal Sciences Beef Blog at http:// www.thebeefblog.com/.

Put Out Your Hot Spots by The FlyLady

Marla Cilley Do you feel like the whole world is crashing in on top of you? Believe it or not it happens to all of us from time to time! Especially during the Holiday Season.

When we get busy, we feel that we don't have time to do even the simplest of routines. So what do we do ! We let our HOT SPOTS take over our homes!

Yes that is all it is! You come in the door tired and ready to drop your load where ever you can put it! Then you crash! No wait you have to throw something together for supper and I mean throw! Because when you are finished the kitchen looks like a bomb went off and you feel like you could get out of the way. By this time you are so overwhelmed that you just want to hide so you go to bed without doing the smallest of a before bed routine and all of a sudden your home has exploded in your face and your husband is pitching one of his usual fits! Ugly words are exchanged and you feel terrible!

Here is the secret to stopping this explosion before it starts. When you hear yourself saying that you don't have time or you don't have the energy to do something. Stop dead in your tracks and set a timer for 5, 10, or even 15 minutes and do a quick pick up and put away. That is all it takes to make you not feel so overwhelmed.

Our Hot Spots attack more than our home. They hurt us inside by causing us to feel bad because we can't keep up, as well as zap our energy! Now I want you to pay close attention! You can start over anytime! You are never behind! Do you hear me?

That stinking thinking of "I don't have enough time" is for the birds! It is what got your home in the shape it was in! It's our perfectionism rearing its ugly head one more time! You can stop the downward spiral by replacing those terrible words, "I don't have time!" with "I can do just 5 minutes!"

This is a huge attitude adjustment for most of us. It takes time and worst of all we don't even realize we are doing it. Now that it has been brought to your attention, you will hear yourself says those words. When you do; turn them around and just set your timer and do just a little. I can hear you now! "BUT! I really don't have the time! She doesn't understand. Well I am here to tell you that I used to think the same way and I have changed my negative thoughts into positive ones and you can too. It all starts with the realization of what you are doing to yourself with those words. It

New FARM RULES

A new rule will impact many farms and agri-businesses in Indiana. The rule is called "Certification for Distributors and Users of Fertilizer Materials."

A state law in 2009 was passed by the Indiana General Assembly to create the rule. It will be administered through the Office of the Indiana State Chemist (OISC). Note that for the purposes of this rule "fertilizer material" is defined to mean both commercial fertilizer and manure from a confined feeding operation (CFO).

There are two basic parts to the rule:

Those hired to apply, handle or transport fertilizer for agricultural purposes within Indiana must become certified through the OSIC by Jan. 1, 2012. Anvone applying manure from confined feeding operations must become certified through the OSIC by Jan. 1, 2012.

A new certification, known as Category 14, was initiated by the OSIC to license individuals who must comply with the new rule. To become certified in Category 14 applicators can take an exam which will be available at remote testing sites in 2011. Leo Reed, the OISC's manager of certification and licensing, said, "The key is fertilizer material 'for hire or manure,'" Reed said. "Those applying any fertilizer materials for hire and those people applying manure from a CFO — even to their own property - must receive Category 14 certification if they use in excess of 10 cubic yards, or 4,000 gallons, of manure per year."

"So if you're applying manure from those facilities you need certification. If you're transporting manure from those facilities, you need certification. If you're distributing manure from your facility or individuals are coming to pick it up from vou, vou need certification or at least a fertilizer dealer permit." CFOs are livestock facilities that house at least 300 cattle or 600 swine or sheep or 30,000 fowl, such as chickens, turkeys or other poultry. There are about 1,500 CFOs in Indiana. Because they house more animals than CFOs. concentrated animal feeding operations, or CAFOs. also fall under Category 14.

The Category 14 exam consists of about 70 questions. The exam is free, although remote testing sites operated by a contracted vendor of H&R Block charge a fee. Passing the exam qualifies participants to be licensed. A five-year private applicator license is $20, while a fertilizer business license is $45 and good for one year. A one-year fertilizer distributor license is $45 and requires no certification exam. No extra license fees will be charged to those holding pesticide licenses.

For additional information about Category 14, exam testing sites and pre-test training sessions, visit the OISC website http:// www.isco.purdue.edu/ and click on the "Fertilizer Applicator Certification Rule" link, or call OISC toll-free at 1-800-893-6637

Purdue Pesticide Programs will offer a training manual in "Category 14 Januarv. Fertilizer Agricultural Applicator" will sell for $32 and be available through Purdue Extension's The Education Store at http://www.the-educationstore.com/ or 1-888-398-4636. ALL-IN-ONE GADGETS MAKE

SMART HOLIDAY GIFTS

(ARA) - Smart phones, music players, e-readers, netbooks, remotes, pedometers - many popular technology gadgets make excellent holiday gifts. But each item separately takes up space in your purse, your briefcase and on your family room table. A smart gift giver this holiday season is one who consolidates the electronic gadgets - instead of adding to the pile.

Thanks to how quickly technology evolves, you can easily consolidate your electronic gadgets to reduce the number and weight of gizmos you're carrying around. Here are a few ideas:

E-readers and tablet computers - When you're on the road and receive a document you need to review and sign-off on, doing so usually requires a computer, printer and scanner. With the new Pocket eDGe from enTourage Systems, you have the functionality of all those devices in one. This compact, multipurpose, Wi-Fi enabled dualbook has an E-Ink screen with a stylus on one side and a 7-inch LCD screen for e-mailing, video viewing and Web browsing on the other. Another unique feature of the Pocket eDGe is both screens interact, so if you need to check the meaning of a word in a document you're reading on the E-Ink screen, you can select it and find the definition on the LCD screen through a quick online search.

eDGe with entertainment uses are quickly evolving to bring more and more elements into one unit. Now, not only can you play games through these consoles, but you can stream the weather report, watch movies, play music, check out the latest headlines and, in some cases, exercise - just to name a few activities. If you have one of these devices in your family room, you won't need the DVD player, exercise videos or radio cluttering up your shelves any longer.

* Remotes galore - When you go to turn on that gaming system, how many remotes do you have to use to get everything powered up and working? The Harmony remote is a universal remote that allows you to program all of your electronic devices into it, so you don't have to keep searching for that "other remote." One remote means less clutter on your table, couch or overstuffed chair.

* Exercise tools - To get an accurate sense of distance on a run or bike ride, you'll need a pedometer or GPS. To stay motivated and entertained while you exercise, you'll use an mp3 player. To stay within your target heart rate zone, you'll need a heart rate monitor. Who wants to have all that equipment on them while they exercise? Having a music player combined with a timer, pedometer and heart monitor all in one device lessens the number of toys needed, and makes the prep time for exercising quicker. Several devices on the market, ranging other devices like the Pocket from wrist watches to mp3 players, combine these elements.

> You can be a smart holiday gift giver this year with technology that doesn't add to - but actually reduces - some of the chaotic clutter of your recipients' digital lives. Join the trend with consolidated technology.

GIVE THE GIFT OF HOLIDAY MEMORIES

(ARA) - Some say that the spirit of the holidays isn't what it used to be. The overwhelming task of buying gifts for everyone in the family can make you feel like it's all about what's under the tree. This year, when you're making your gift list, think of presents that inspire treasured memories and create new ones for the future. By giving the gift of memories, you'll be bringing the true spirit of the holidays back to your celebrations.

The holidays are a time of traditions, from the food that graces the tables to the movies you watch each year to the places you travel to meet family and friends. Rather than running from store to store picking up the latest gadgets and fads, take a few moments to plan out your list based on memories that you've shared with each person to whom you're giving a gift.

Use these ideas as inspiration for giving holiday gifts with a hint of nostalgia.

Whether it's the smell of baking cookies that takes you back to wintry days spent in Grandma's kitchen or the spicy fragrance of cinnamon that brings to mind sipping spiced apple cider around the fireplace. at this time of year, it's no surprise that smell is the sense most closely tied to memories. Bringing back those memories can be a simple as lighting scented candles from the Yankee Candle Company. The true-to-life fragrance in classic candles like Balsam & Cedar. Christmas Cookie or Sparkling Cinnamon - or even new scents like Holiday Garland or Winter Wonderland - can transport you back to cherished experiences of the past. Whether you light them in your own home or give them as presents to friends and family, Yankee Candles are a great way to give a gift that inspires memories.

* Gathering together to watch holiday movies is a cozy and festive way to celebrate the season, but it can be difficult to get everyone together at the exact time that a movie is going to be aired on television. And the true classics of the season aren't played in theaters. Give a gift of a group of holiday movie DVDs that have stood the test of time and you'll bring back memories of past holiday movie get-togethers as well as passing on the tradition to the next generation.

* Photos are one of the best ways to take a quick glimpse into the past. With digital photography's rise popularity, the old photo prints of the past often languish in a closet, mostly forgotten. Give them new life by creating a scrapbook of holiday memories, incorporating old photos. holiday cards and letters. If your gift recipient is the crafty type, simply gather all the elements together in a kit and let her create a scrapbook that will be exactly what she wants.

* Everyone treasures the house they grew up in, even long after they've moved away. To bring back the memories of growing up and holidays in your first home, commission a portrait of the house you grew up in. It can be created from old photographs, and it makes a wonderful gift for siblings and parents. It'll be the perfect conversation piece at your holiday celebration - light scented candles that bring to mind the traditions you remember and take the time to let everyone talk about their favorite childhood reminiscences.

Evoking holidays gone by through the gifts you give is a simple way to make the season meaningful. For more ways to bring fond memories of the holidays into your home and give memorable gifts like Yankee Candles, go to www.yankeecandle.com.

FOOD GIFTS INSPIRE HOLIDAY MEMORIES

(ARA) - What are your most wonderful childhood holiday memories? Anxiously waiting for Santa to arrive? Picking up each brightly wrapped package and giving it a gentle shake? Sneaking in the kitchen to get the first taste of Grandma's special prime rib? The memories are so vivid it's hard to pick just one

It's that time of the year when many people are starting to get their holiday gift-giving lists together. But rather than relying on ties, candles and candies. why notaim a little higher? This year, when putting together your holiday gift list, try starting a new tradition of creating memorable moments for your family and friends that they can look back on, years from now, with big smiles on their faces.

Many memories revolve around the family dinner table, especially the guest of honor at all meals: the meat. Whether it's a mouth-watering prime rib, a melt-in-your-mouth turkey or a flavorful ham, the family holiday meal evokes many heart-warming memories.

Evoking memories with food gifts is easier - and less expensive - than you might think. Here's how to get started. Sit down with a blank sheet of paper. Divide it into two columns and jot down your favorite holiday memories in the first column.

In the second column, add the individuals on your gift list. Then, start to match the memory-making items you'd like to share. To make the gift even more special, write down the memory in a special card for the recipient.

The scents of the holidays may also inspire some holiday food gifts. Cloves, cinnamon, sage and garlic are just a few of the wafting scents that greet you when you step into your memory holiday kitchen. Look for food gifts that bring those scents to life to add another dimension to your holiday present.

There are many online holiday gift resources to help you make these memories come to life.

By making memorable food the center of your holiday giving, you'll not only bring your loved one joy this year, but bring them back to the joyful times of the past.

miles away? How would they feel if you asked them to be a part of your family at Christmas time?

Almost everyone makes New Year's resolutions. This year make some at Christmas time. Such as a resolution to be polite to the over-worked sales clerk who isn't moving as fast as you would like. To pray before you eat if you have gotten out of the habit. To say "Thank you" and "Please" more often. And, ves...OF COURSE ... HAVE A MERRY CHRISTMAS ONE AND ALL.
